Foe of New Deal Gains 5 to 4 Lead In Rhode Island

Democrats Faced With Loss of Representative to Congress.

Holt and Bivins Race in Virginia

Yesterday's Elections.

RHODE ISLAND—Returns from 71 of 112 voting districts gave Charles Risk, Republican, 25,468 votes to 20,554 for Antonio Prince, Democrat.

VIRGINIA—Few upsets were recorded in the State primary. The close race in Newport between Saxon Holt and Albert Bevens attracted widespread attention. Senator Cecil Connor, of Leesburg, was defeated by T. B. Glasscock.

MISSISSIPPI—Meager returns gave Hugh White a slight lead over his nearest rival for Governor, Paul Johnson.

By the Associated Press.

Providence, R. I., Aug. 6.—The loss of a Representative in the National Congress faced the Democratic Party tonight as Charles F. Risk, Republican, slowly increased an early lead over Antonio Prince, Democrat, in today's special congressional election which constituted the first test of the Roosevelt-lan policies in 1935.

With 71 of the district's 112 voting districts in, Risk held a lead of 25,468 to Prince's 20,554. These figures included the vote of five districts in the city of Providence where Risk received 989 votes to 424 for Prince, whereas a year ago the Republican candidate was given a lead of 220 votes in the same group of districts.

Loses Home Precinct.

Prince was defeated in his own home precinct in Woonsocket, while in Lincoln, Risk's home town, the native son was given a vote of 2,328 to 1,328 for Prince by voters who made the town Democratic by a wide margin in the election a year ago.

The town of Jamestown went almost 3 to 1 Republican, while a year ago the Republican lead was a slim one.

Referenda on work projects amounting to a little in excess of $12,000,000, which were sponsored by the Democratic Gov. Theodore Francis Greene, were, in general, in imminent danger of being rejected. The only item favored in the long list was a $33,000,000 loan for relief.

A Republican, Henry S. Wheeler, was chosen Mayor of Newport, polling 5,449 votes to 4,166 for Geremiah P. Mahoney.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 6.—With few upsets recorded in today's Democratic primary for nomination to the State Senate and House of Delegates, a nip-and-tuck contest between Saxon W. Holt, president pro-tem of the Senate, and A. L. Bivins, Newport News attorney, drew widespread attention.

The veteran chairman of the Senate privileges and elections committee had 2,057 votes in Newport News City to 1,951 for Bivins, with Hampton and Elizabeth City County still to finish counting ballots.

"Antiorganization" candidates for the house in Portsmouth City—J. N. Maxey and Allen S. Carr—were conceded the nomination there, where a vigorous campaign had been waged with the victors championing a charter change to allow direct ward representation on the city council.

Senator Cecil Connor, Leesburg, was defeated by T. B. Glasscock in the Twenty-eighth District. The vote was Glasscock 3,943, Connor 2,601. Glasscock caried Culpeper and Farquier counties but lost Loudoun by a close vote.

Maurice Rosenberg defeated J. Fred Birrell, incumbent, and George H. Evans for the House of Delegates in the Alexandria District. The vote was Rosenberg, 1,291, Evans, 873 and Birrell 632.

Baby Dies, Restored To Life, Dies Again

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—An 8 ounce baby girl died tonight after an all-day struggle by five physicians and two nurses to keep her alive.

The tiny infant, whose birth was premature by four and a half months, was normal in every respect save size. She measured 13 inches in length and had a head circumference of 9 inches.

The infant, born at 6:25 a. m., was placed immediately in an incubator. Late in the afternoon she stopped breathing, but after a series of injections and increased applications of oxygen she appeared to rally.

At 6:45 p. m., Dr. Lester Samuels pronounced her dead.

Mussolini Calls 75,000 More To the Colors

Move Follows Report on Massing of Troops by Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 6.—Premier Mussolini's long awaited "communique No. 9," called 75,000 additional men to the Italian colors today, boosted the total of men under arms or in training to 235,000 and seemed to confirm reports that his objective is 1,000,000 men in uniform by October.

Well-informed circles recently said that is the program.

Today's mobilization orders came quickly after reports reached Rome that the Ethiopian Emperor, Haile Selassie, had sanctioned the concentration of 60,000 Ethiopian warriors on Italy's East African frontier.

45,000 to Train.

About 45,000 of the 75,000 men summoned today will go to cantonments for intensive training for East African service. These, with men training in Italy, those already sent to Africa and native divisions recruited there, make the 235,000 total.

Unofficial reports said Il Duce has quietly sent to East Africa or created there other battalions.

Later the war department announced that all prospective officers of the classes of 1909-1914 inclusive who have not completed officers' training must begin to do so by November 15, ending the training by May 15, 1936.

These embryo officers, including thousands of men with professional degrees and regular army men who have reached the subaltern stage, must drop everything and finish their training.

The order also calls out all men of 17 years of age or more who have not served in the regular army because they received training in military academies.

Many Volunteers.

It also affects officers now living on pensions who are under the age of 39, and who "still aspire" to readmission into the service, and officers who have left the service because of foreign residence.

Simultaneously an announcement from the Italian Embassy in London said several thousand voluntary enlistments from officers and soldiers living abroad had arrived to swell the list of volunteers for the East African forces.

It also was announced that Premier Mussolini had received a telegram from the former Italian Combatants Association, saying "Italian combatants in New York, in extraordinary assembly, affirmed their indefatigable adherence to your excellency and their readiness to give their blood for the triumph of the impregnable right of the Italian nation."

Announcement of the mobilization was withheld until after the Nazis Revive Storm Troop To Oust Reds

Brown Shirts, Depleted in Former Purge, to Fight 'Sabotage.'

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 6.—Remnants of the once powerful brown-shirted Storm Troopers, it became apparent tonight, have been chosen to carry on an important part of the Nazi campaign against "saboteurs."

Following parades of Brown Shirts in several cities, including Berlin, the newspaper Der Angriff announced: "The Storm Troop has jumped into the fight against Jews, political Catholicism and reactionaries."

Patrols Bear Cartoons.

The Storm Troops, whose diminution beginning July 30, 1934, during the "blood purge" that for a while almost seemed to foreshadow their complete elimination as a political factor, are more in evidence than ever. For weeks their patrols have carried ironic signs depicting a priest baptising a Jew.

An authoritative source said today he believed the Nazi campaign to obstruct foreign correspondents was caused by fear of losing the 1936 Olympic games.

Should the games be taken to some other country I would be a severe blow to the Nazi regime, both economically and politically. Intense preparations have been made for them and officials expect an influx of foreign currency next year to stimulate business.

News Drive Opened.

After a complete cessation Monday of the campaign against the "lies" of foreign newspapers, the drive was reopened today with front page attacks against a Canadian newspaper (Edmonton Bulletin) for a purported article discussing relations between young girls in a voluntary labor camp and men in a nearby Storm Troop school and labor camp.

The Nachtausgabe demanded to know when foreign governments would intervene to halt this "drive of lies" against Germany.

Der Angriff pushed its anti-Jewish agitation in a long article pointing out that a firm headed by a Jew monopolized the business of supplying music for German sound films.

The Catholic paper, Church and Life at Oldenburg, was suspended until October 1 because it allegedly "distorted historical facts" in an article about the Thirty Years' War and other happenings in Germany of years ago.

New York Pushes Drive on Rackets

Merrick, of O'Connell Case Fame, Gets Key Post.

New York, Aug. 6.—Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey tonight announced the appointment of Wayne Merrick as chief investigator in his drive on organized rackets.

Merrick, the Department of Justice agent, who was credited with having "broken" the kidnaping of John J. O'Connell, jr., in Albany, two years ago, will take over his duties tomorrow.

The former Iowan will direct the undercover work involved in ferreting out New York's "big shot" racketeers, whose power Dewey is out to smash.

Lobby Agents Hunt Hopson In Vain Here

By Felix Bruner.

Howard C. Hopson, 250-pound utilities magnate, who is wanted as a witness by both the Senate and House lobby investigating committees, still was missing last night after leading process servers, city detectives and investigators a merry chase.

The chase included a race up Connecticut avenue, in which speed limits were freely fractured, by rival investigators of the two committees. They were following a tip that the missing witness was at the Shoreham Hotel. He had been, but wasn't there when the subpena servers arrived.

It included also a trip by investigators to the estate of Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, near Leesburg, Va. Two years ago Hurley produced Hopson after the Pecora stock market investigating committee had been looking for him for six weeks. Hopson wasn't found at the Hurley estate.

Hurley to Testify.

Hurley, who is attorney for the Associated Gas & Electric Co., controlled by Hopson, denied that he knew where Hopson was. Hurley is to testify before the Senate committee today, and in spite of his denials, committee members say they hope he may bring Hopson with him.

Chairman O'Connor of the House investigating committee, who is directing the search, promised in true detective style that there would "be a break within a few hours." Hopson spent Monday night at the Shoreham. So did O'Connor, who lives there.

"We'll get him," said O'Connor. "I've given orders to have him brought to me at any time they find him. I'll constitute myself a sub-committee of one and question him immediately. We want to know what he knows about the utility lobby."

O'Connor admitted, however, that his investigators couldn't force Hopson to come in even if they did find him. He is wanted merely as a witness and the most that can be done would be to serve him with a forthwith subpena.

"But if he doesn't come in," added O'Connor, "we'll bring contempt charges and arrest him."

Hopson has been wanted for weeks by the lobby investigators. Yesterday morning Barnard B. Robinson, representing the Associated Gas & Electric Co., calmly told the House committee that he had been talking to Hopson in the latter's room at the Shoreham.

Look Under Bed.

Immediately, the chase was on. Clyde Tavenner, committee investigator, hopped in an automobile and sped for the hotel. Somebody tipped off the Senate committee. Clutching a subpena, Hebert Blomquist, Senate investigator, took up the race. Somebody called police headquarters. Two detectives sped up Connecticut avenue.

The sleuths arrived more or less simultaneously. No, Hopson wasn't there. The girl at the cigar counter thought she remembered selling a cigar to a man fitting his description. Other hotel employes vaguely remembered him. That was all. Later on, O'Connor said, the room occupied by Hopson was found. His baggage was still there. Sleuths looked in the bathroom and under the bed. No Hopson.

"Where do you think Hopson is

Taxes on Ability to Pay Defended by Treasury; C. of C. Answers Today

Administration 'Deal' Shelves Bonus Issue for This Session

Promise of Vote on Bill in January and Late August Adjournment Placate Insurgents; Thomas Hails 'Concession.'

The bonus issue last night appeared definitely wiped from the present session legislative slate, under informal agreement between Administration forces and strong veterans' factions to bring the question to a showdown next January.

The last formidable barrier in the path of postponement was crossed last night, when Patman bill advocates, meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, voted acceptance of overtures made by the Senate steering and policy committees.

Under the leadership of Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, a committee was appointed to confer with Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson to cement the understanding. They will ask definite assurance that the Senate Finance Committee will meet early in January to report out a bill that will be given immediate floor right-of-way.

Robinson, it was said, is willing to give this assurance. Thomas regards it as the first major "concession" yet coming from an Administration quarter, in the direction of bonus cash payment.

"It means the bonus is going to be paid next year," he said optimistically.

Earlier, another bonus faction was heard from, when a bi-partisan sponsored bonus bill, providing for cash payment of the bonus under a plan that would entail no expansion of the currency, was introduced in the Senate, with the understanding it will not be pressed until next session.

A late August adjournment and a fixed date for a vote on the bonus next session, was the lure held out by the Senate steering and policy committees, eager to avoid any last-minute tie-up of legislation as a result of insurgent moves.

In an effort to sidetrack unwanted amendments, including the bonus and the $3,000,000,000 inflationary Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill, Senate Majority Leader Robinson was authorized to move for tabling of any "riders proposing legislation irrelevant to the subject matter of the bill under consideration during the remainder of the session."

Decision of the committees to make the subject matter of bonus legislation "a special order for a date in January" was announced by Robinson following the committee conference.

Ford's 600 Million Discussed as Instance of Wealth-Breaking.

Jackson Attacks House Bill Critics

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration yesterday struck back at critics of its wealth-taxing policies with charts statistics and official testimony designed to show that the income-tax range is unabalanced and "the propertied class" should pay the cost of recovery.

Its selected spokesman was Robert H. Jackson, counsel for the Internal Revenue Bureau. Appearing before the Senate Finance Committee on the $250,000,000 House revenue bill, he defended extension of the "ability to pay" principle to income, inheritance and gift taxes.

He admitted in effect that the bulk of Henry Ford's $600,000,000 estate would have to be disposed of through stock and bond issues, and sold to "other interests" or the public, in order to meet new inheritance tax levies.

C. of C. to Answer.

He will be answered today by representatives of the United States Chamber of Commerce with figures and analyses pointing to a disrupting blow at the whole economic structure, if wealth-breaking proposals are carried into operation.

Five spokesmen for the chamber scheduled to appear this morning before the Finance Committee include Fred H. Clausen, of Wisconsin, chairman of the chamber's tax committee; Fred B. Fairchild, professor of economics at Yale; Roy C. Osgood, Chicago banker, and E. C. Alvord, Washington attorney.

Henry Ford has contended that under proposed inheritance tax schedules, control of his vast automobile properties would pass to Wall Street banking interests in the event of his death.

Ford Estate Discussed.

Jackson, the first Administration witness to appear before the committee since the refusal of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., to take any stand on the House bill failed to refute Ford's contention.

"This equity might be disposed of in part through a bond issue, or through preferred stock, or by sale of a portion of the common stock," Jackson told the committee.

"The effect of this would be to convert what is now a family industry into a widely owned one, and to permit the public to share in the future earnings of an enterprise to the building of which public patronage has made a substantial contribution."

Pointing out that internal revenue figures may not be made public under law, Jackson cited the report of the Ford Motor Co. to the Massachusetts commissioner of corporations, as indicating a net worth of approximately $600,000,000.

Inheritance Tax Fair.

But of this, the witness contended, Edsel B. Ford, son of the famous manufacturer, owns 41½ per cent of the outstanding stock, and that this interest, to the approximate value of $246,000,000, would not be touched by the inheritance or estate taxes.

He further argued that such fortunes are so rare "that the hypothetical application of this law to the Ford fortune would be a distortion of its usual application."

House Ways and Means Republicans had contended that application of the inheritance tax principle to the Ford estate might result in Government ownership and operation of the Ford factories.

"It is the belief of the Treasury," Jackson concluded "that the revenue possibilities of inheritance taxes have never been fully tested by Federal legislation; that it is a fundamentally fair method of applying the principle of taxation according to ability to pay, and presents the

Striker Killed In French Riot On Wage Cuts

Workers Raise Red Flag Over a Police Station; Troops in Control.

By the United Press.

Brest, France, Aug. 6.—War-like conditions, reminiscent of the days when American doughboys tramped through Brest en route to the western front, prevailed here today as a result of orders by authorities after rioters protesting wage cuts plunged the city into chaos.

The Red flag was hoisted over a police station.

One striker was killed and scores were wounded. Two republican guards and a police official suffered serious injuries.

Martial law was proclaimed. Authorities closed the arsenal and ordered troops to reinforce gendarms in guarding vital points.

Mobs of workers, angered by Premier Pierre Laval's economy decrees, sought to win the army to their side and precipitate rebellion. They formed a column and tried to force their way into the barracks housing the Second Regiment of Colonial Infantry. Repulsed by Loyalist troops, they reformed lines and gathered for demonstrations at the Socialist House of the People.

Delay Paris Express.

Manifestations testing resources of the armed forces reached serious proportions when rioters stormed the railway station and prevented the Paris Express from departing.

The train left 50 minutes later after police repeatedly charged the mobs and cleared railway tracks for traffic.

Marchers then attacked the town's subprefecture, tearing down the tricolor of France and hoisting the Red flag.

The Communist emblem was torn down by Jacques Henry, subprefect, after the mob had been scattered—battered by police batons.

Henry was beaten severely and was sent to the hospital after police rescued him from the irate throngs. Several soldiers were

Wife Released After Slaying Rich Husband

Authority dealt gently with Nancy Lee Yakel, 24, yesterday after she killed her wealthy and jealous 58-year-old husband in Belle Haven, fashionable Alexandria suburb.

Coroner C. A. Ransome of Fairfax County released her in the custody of her lawyer, to appear later at Fairfax County Courthouse to be freed or to furnish bond. He acted after hearing her story of threats, intimidation and violence and, finally, her husband's raging return to their home from Reno and the subsequent shooting.

He also had read letters from the husband to his wife, who will be a mother again in about six weeks; letters from Reno which, police said, ordered her to leave his house with her mother and her 5-year-old daughter by another marriage, or die by his hand.

May Drop Case.

Within 48 hours, said Coroner Ransome, Mrs. Yakel's lawyer is to produce her at a hearing before the Commonwealth attorney, who will either place formal charges and set bond, or drop the case, leaving her free. General opinion in the county, including that of police officials, is that there will be no charges.

If charges are placed, however, preliminary court hearing will be deferred until after the birth of Mrs. Yakel's child, the coroner said.

George A. Yakel, a wealthy retired contractor—police said they found $10,000 in bonds in the rear of his car after the shooting—returned early yesterday to the home he built for his bride two years ago. He had been away for a week at Reno. He had said he was going there to get a divorce.

Mrs. Yakel and her mother, Mrs. Hortense Elliott, were in bed. He knocked on the door, but they would not answer. According to Mrs. Yakel's story, he knocked and kicked so loudly that both women

Rockville's Police Force Stirs Official Wrath With His Zeal

1-Man Department Takes 'Without Fear or Favor' Order Seriously, Councilmen and Judge Find; Latter Quashes Cases 'Without Fear or Favor.'

As an indication of what he thought about the town council's instructions to its new policeman, Montgomery County Police Judge Harold C. Smith in Rockville yesterday wrote across parking warrants issued to county and town officials:

"Dismissed."

Three weeks ago when the town council appointed as Rockville's new police officer, Leslie B. Thompson, they made it clear that his principal duty would be to enforce the town's parking restrictions without "fear or favor."

Last Friday, Thompson had his first opportunity to perform as instructed. He found Judge Smith's machine parked on the main street over the two-hour limit. He tagged it.

Judge Smith told his friends in Rockville he didn't believe he should have been treated that way. Friends said the judge was very angry.

So yesterday when parking warrants for G. LaMar Kelly, a member of the without-fear-or-favor council, and Frank H. Karn, president of the county board of commissioners, came before Judge Smith, the cases were not only dismissed, but forfeiture was refused on $3.50 collateral posted by Kelly. The judge said as far as he was concerned, county and town officials shouldn't be fined for parking overtime.

Apparently State's Attorney James H. Pugh feels the same way about officials arrested by Thompson on any charge. At least, when Talmadge Watkins, Gaithersburg Federal Land Bank appraiser, came into court yesterday, Pugh nolle prossed a disorderly conduct charge against him when Thompson declined at Pugh's request to withdraw it.

Thompson said he charged Watkins with disorderly conduct when the appraiser called him names after the policeman told him to "move on" with his car, parked

'Blind Flying' Plane Plunges Into Bay, 5 Aboard Rescued

Five Army officers and enlisted men narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when their amphibian plane made a forced landing in Chesapeake Bay 3 miles off Solomon's Island.

Three of the occupants were brought to Walter Reed Hospital here. Their companions were uninjured.

Pvt. Michael J. Lukic suffered a broken leg. First Lieuts. Gerald F. Williams and M. W. Bowman were treated for bruises.

The tri-motored ship, witnesses said, rebounded 30 feet into the air when it first struck the water and then nosed down.

All five occupants aided in forcing open the door of the cabin. One of the men momentarily was pinned in the plane by a foot, but escaped by removing a shoe.

James O. Lore, of Solomon's Island, was fishing less than 100 yards from the point where the plane struck the water. As the Army officers clambered to the wing he went to their rescue in a small boat.

Later the crew of a privately owned sail boat, Spray, aided in pulling the plane to land.

Two Spend Night on Bottom Of Bay in Test of Diving Bell

Two men spent most of last night on the bottom of Chesapeake Bay, sitting on small, piled-up sand bags, looking at the fishes. Sand bags and men, Dr. R. V. Truitt and Gilbert Klingle, of the Chesapeake Biological Laboratory, Solomons Island, were snug and dry inside a diving contraption which enables human beings to stay under water for days at a time.

Known as the bentharium, the diving apparatus was initiated late yesterday. Dr. Truitt, director of the laboratory, and Klingle, who superintended the building of the bentharium, were lowered feet first into the chamber. Down it went, until laboratory students on the float could see it no longer. But an almost constant conversation was kept up through the exhaust tube. And oxygen was constantly pumped into the bentharium through another tube.

Last night Dr. Truitt and Klingle descended to a depth of 25 feet and through a port-hole sort of window watched the fish swim by. But the bentharium is capable of going down 300 feet and later will be used to explore the greatest depths in the bay, about 183 feet.

The purpose of the new diving apparatus is to enable scientists to carry on continuous and persistent studies of biotic conditions. The diving bell will be in constant operation the rest of the week off Solomons Island.

But Hastings Cautions on 'New Dealing'; Lindbergh Mentioned for 1936.

By the Associated Press.

A Progressive's warning that Republican liberals must be brought into Republican Party councils for success in 1936 drew a suggestion yesterday from Senator Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, that they should "not go cavorting around with New Deal vagaries."

Senator Norbeck (Republican), of South Dakota, was author of the statement on which Hastings commented in a day which included an announcement by Robert H. Lucas that he had found support in various sections for Charles A. Lindbergh as the Republican presidential nominee next year.

But the flier would not attain the constitutional age limit of 35 until February, 1937, four months after election time and a month after inauguration. Lucas, former executive director of the Republican national committee, has been sounding out sentiment for various suggested G. O. P., candidates.

Norbeck said in an interview that "the Republican Party must offer something more than criticisms of Roosevelt and the scare about losing the Constitution."

Must Fight Third Party.

"Above all," Norbeck added, "they can not win without inviting the Progressives into the party and giving them a voice in party affairs. Otherwise other Northwestern States will join the third party movement already controlling Minnesota and Wisconsin—the States whose votes are needed in the electoral college for Republican success."

The Delaware Republican said he agreed that Progressives should be invited into the party, but added:

"If we should write a platform that is satisfactory to the Progressives and give them a voice in party affairs, I express the hope that they may feel bound by the party promises and live up to the party obligations and not go cavorting around with New Deal vagaries.

"I personally am a great deal more liberal than many people believe, but I feel that I have to be a little hard boiled in the Senate in order to offset somewhat a lot of the things the so-called Progressives desire to do, which seem to me to be very dangerous."

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the committee meanwhile was preparing to leave for New England for two weeks of golf and organization work.

Mrs. Hoyal Named.

He announced that Mrs. Robert Lincoln Hoyal, of Arizona, had been named director of the women's division of the national committee to succeed Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, of West Virginia, who resigned in February. Mrs. Hoyal will make her first appearance in her new capacity at an organization meeting in Los Angeles this week.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, would not discuss Norbeck's stand.

He has been represented as feeling, however, that the party's platform must recognize "Government responsibility for social welfare," and embrace what he has called a "rational liberalism."

Two other names written in on a questionnaire sent by Lucas to party workers to sound sentiment on nomination possibilities were those of former Gov. Winant, of New Hampshire, and former Gov. Caulfield, of Missouri.

Lucas said he doubted that he would make public the poll standing of the candidates, as he wished to avoid any injustice.

"About 1,500 replies have come in," he said. The correspondents say in most cases that the Roosevelt Administration's popularity is dwindling.

Relief Workers Picket Kansas Courthouse

Relief Strikers In Kansas City Demand Funds

Courthouse Picketed by 1,000 Workers; Wage Cut Protested.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Kans., Aug. 6.—Shouting they would stay until their demands were met, approximately 1,000 relief workers swarmed through the Wyandotte County Courthouse tonight in protest against a two-thirds cut in work relief payments and other grievances.

County commissioners, meeting in special session, refused all demands in a 12-point petition today except one asking free milk for children. The commissioners agreed to consider a request for a 25 per cent increase in the poor-fund tax levy.

The demonstrators were boisterous, but gave no indication of violence. Nevertheless, police reserves were called out.

Groups of demonstrators toured relief projects throughout the city and urged workers to quit and join in the protest. Lester Wickliffe, county emergency relief administrator, said between 5,500 and 6,500 are now employed on relief jobs.

In addition to continuance of relief on the former scale for the current week with a future increase of 25 per cent until Works Progress Administration projects open, the 12-point program demanded free milk for children, aged and ill persons, ice for employes on relief projects, and the right to organize "bona-fide labor unions" on projects.

The relief workers also asked that the commissioners furnish food and beds to the demonstrators at the courthouse.

The mass protest followed a curtailment in relief made necessary by a cut in Federal work relief funds for the county from $225,000 to $80,000 a month pending the start of the WPA program.

Bartender Is Arrested In Illegal Beer Sale

Lester Clark, a bartender in a beer parlor belonging to Joseph A. Moran, Colmar Manor, was arrested yesterday for selling beer after the legal 2 o'clock deadline.

Federal Share Of Ship Subsidy Limited in Bill

Revised Measure Sent Back to Senate Allows U.S. to Pay 33 1-3%.

By the Associated Press.

A revised ship subsidy bill, designed chiefly to meet objections found by President Roosevelt in earlier ones, was introduced yesterday by Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York.

It again carried provisions under which the Government would put up in cash the difference between costs of constructing ships in this country and in foreign yards, and finance as well the difference betweeen costs of operating ships with American crews and with assertedly lower paid foreign crews.

Where the old bill placed no limit upon the amount of the Government's share of the building cost, the new measure fixed it at 33 1-3 per cent, except where special showing was made justifying lifting it to 40 per cent.

Operators' Recourse.

The authority created by the bill would have until July 1, 1936, to determine how the present mail contracts should be revised, and what conmepsation, if any, is due the ship operators for their concelation.

Operators declining to subject their contracts to such revision would be denied further payments upon the expiration of the time limit and would have access to the courts for any damages accruing.

The bill provides that during the next seven years the Government will put up all the money for building new ships, and allow the operator to pay it back in 15 annual installments.

The operator pays back only the amount equaling what the vessel would cost if built in foreign yards, the Government absorbing the balance from its construction fund.

Shipbuilders wishing to put up 25 per cent of the foreign cost of the vessel in cash, may have 20 years in which to pay the balance.

Under both these types of contract, the Government builds the ship under its own supervision, merely selling the vessel to the operator.

Can Build Own Ships.

Under a third type of contract, the operator may build his own ship and the Government will pay to him the difference between American and foreign costs of the job.

A new provision in the bill permits shipowners to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation up to 75 per cent of the foreign cost of their vessels at 3½ per cent interest, but Copeland said the President had not yet passed on this provision.

Any subsidized operator has a salary limit of $25,000.

The Government would limit profits to 6 per cent determined over a five-year period. Any excess would go into a "recapture" fund to apply on paying off the construction of operating subsidy. Copeland estimated the operating subsidy would cost the Government $11,000,000 to $13,000,000 annually.

The New Yorker said he would not bring the new measure up on the floor "unless I have assurance from the Administration that it is entirely satisfactory."

Rhea Has Lead Over Chandler In Kentucky

Lieutenant Governor and Opponent to Meet in Run-Off Primary.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 6.—Thomas S. Rhea, 63-year-old veteran of many Kentucky political battles, clung to his lead tonight over A. B. (Happy) Chandler, 37-year-old lieutenant governor, in their race for the Democratic nomination as governor. A majority is required for nomination.

With returns from 2,449 of the State's 4,219 precincts tabulated, Rhea had a plurality of 5,436 over Chandler, who dubbed Rhea "sales tax Tom" and demanded repeal of the State sales tax. Rhea, who defended the administration of Gov. Ruby Laffoon against Chandler's caustic criticism, contended the sales tax saved the State's credit and kept the schools open.

All the State's 120 counties were represented in the tabulation, which gave Rhea, 121,588; Chandler, 116,152; Frederick A. Wallis, 25,004; Elam Huddleston, 8,856, and Bailey P. Wootton, 1,601.

Rhea and Chandler will fight it out in a run-off primary September 7 for the right to oppose Judge King Swope, of Lexington, the Republican nominee, in the gubernatorial election in November. Swope was assured the Republican nomination by amassing a majority approaching 50,000 on incomplete returns.

Incomplete returns indicated that a run-off would be required to determine Democratic choices for all State-wide offices except one race in which there were only two candidates—commissioner of agriculture.

Keen Johnson, Richmond, Ky., had an impressive plurality for the Democratic nomination as lieutenant governor, but the combined vote of his eight opponents seemed to preclude a majority.

House Leaders Divided, 9 to 8, For Guffey Bill

Ways, Means Majority, in 3-Hour Secret Caucus, Fails to Break Jam.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt was reported authoritatively yesterday to be making another personal attempt to break the deadlock which holds his "must" Guffey coal bill in a House committee.

First, word was transmitted to Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee that the President did not care particularly about details of the "little NRA" bill for the soft coal industry so long as it was reported out to the House floor.

Second, Mr. Roosevelt received a first-hand report on the situation from Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, one committee leader who favors the bill.

These developments were disclosed after Democratic committeeman, in secret session, battled over the measure for three hours. They finally were reported to stand nine to eight in favor of reporting the bill with a recommendation that it be passed.

It was figured, however, that six of the seven Republican committeemen would vote against reporting the bill. Assuming that the one Democrat absent from yesterday's meeting was counted for the bill, the vote in the full committee would be 14 to 11 against the measure.

Their one immediate chance was to get Democrats to agree—as they did on the tax bill—to vote as a unit despite their individual preferences if a majority of Democrats approved the bill. An attempt was made yesterday to win such an agreement, but it was reported to have failed.

The next step was in doubt. Some Democratic committeemen favored, and some opposed, the idea of voting to report the bill without any recommendation whatsoever, letting the House decide what should be done with it.

The committee Democrats already had agreed that if the bill were reported it should not include the appropriation of $300,000,000 to buy up coal mines to keep them out of production.

Likewise, they had accepted another suggestion by a sub-committee headed by Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), Washington, to reduce from 25 to 15 per cent the tax levied against operators, who refused to abide by wage and hour stipulations.

President Roosevelt was understood to be agreeable to those changes so long as the bill finally enacted provided some sort of a base for a fair test of Federal power to regulate an industry. He had suggested in a letter to Hill that a court decision should clarify that point and asked that despite doubts as to constitutionality the sub-committee not block the legislation.

Vinson went to the White House with a group of Congressmen to talk about a tobacco grading bill. When the others left, the President called Vinson back to discuss the Guffey situation with him.

2 N. Y. Society Women Win Divorces at Reno

Mrs. Ann Kauffman Hill won a divorce from Crawford Hill, grandson of the late United States Senator Nathaniel P. Hill of Colorado. Mrs. Hill charged cruelty. Mrs. Mary Emily Bailey Knowles was divorced from Peter Knowles, also on ground of cruelty.

A property settlement which provided for future custody of their children, Louis G., 11, and Mary, 10, was approved by the court in the Hill case. Terms of the agreement and Mrs. Hill's testimony were not disclosed. The couple was married June 5, 1923.

In granting Mrs. Knowles' divorce, the court approved a property settlement and an agreement as to custody of her daughter, Mary Emily, 11, dated June 11, 1935. The Knowles were married December 10, 1921.

Dewey, a leader of the Republican Party in Vermont, who entertained former President Hoover on the latter's recent visit to Vermont, was removed to the Margaret Pillsbury Hospital here, suffering from bad cuts.

Summer Slump Fails to Check Business Gains, Report Shows

By the Associated Press.

Business activity was reported by the Commerce Department yesterday to have shown resistance to summer-slump influences in July.

"Reports on retail sales and construction activity," the department's monthly survey of current business said, "indicate improvement on a seasonally adjusted basis. Freight carloadings have declined, while available data do not indicate much change in the adjusted index of industrial production.

"Outstanding among July developments was the sharp recovery in the steel industry. After moving downward from February to the first week in July, operations expanded steadily from 34 per cent of capacity to 45 per cent in the final week of the month.

Automobile Gain.

"Only part of the gain was attributed to the automobile industry, which enjoyed a relatively large volume of sales during the month.

"The further increase in electric power production was also a favorable indication, although the movement of freight by the railroads has continued to lag.

"Lumber business has been better this month and building supplies generally have benefited from the modest improvement in private construction operations.

"The June improvement in retail sales has continued during the present month with gains in rural areas especially pronounced. Commodity prices have moved slightly lower since May, but there has been practically no change in the index of finished products."

Minerals Increase.

Discussing manufacturing activity during June, the survey said the decline in that month approximated the usual change, while mineral output increased substantially, influenced by large expansion in the coal industry.

"The decline in factory employment in June," the survey said, "was offset by increases in nonmanufacturing industries and in Agriculture so there was probably little or no net change for the month. Average hourly wages in factories were the same in mid June as in May.

Treasury to Repay Cow's Currency Diet

By the Associated Press.

Maybe this story has something to do with high meat prices.

Ren Walcher, a farmer, of Wellington, Kans., advised the Treasury his cow had embarked on a currency diet and had partially eaten $25 protruding from his overalls pocket.

Treasury redemption experts got busy and pieced together the remains. They announced today they would verify Walcher's claim and that he would be repaid in full.

Ickes Hits Back At Steel Men's Bid Complaints

Bethlehem Uses Foreign Ores, Ships, Seamen, PWA Chief Says.

Charges that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation is one of the largest importers of iron ore in the country and that it uses foreign ships with foreign crews were made yesterday by Secretary Ickes. His statement was in answer to complaints of steel manufacturers, headed by Eugene G. Grace, Bethlehem president, that the public works price differential in favor of American-made building material was not sufficiently high.

Ickes added that the Bethlehem company used imported manganese almost exclusively. He said it had a long-time lease on two ore-carrying ships.

Ships Built in Germany, He Says.

"These ships were built in Germany," he said. "They are operated with Swedish crews. The names of the ships are the Amerikaland and the Svealand. The Bethlehem company is the one that is always after legislation for an American merchant marine, manned by American crews. It owns shipyards in Baltimore, Boston and San Francisco."

It was suggested to Ickes that the American supply of manganese cannot meet the demand of the steel companies.

"I suppose there is a shortage of American sailors, too," he said.

Provide 15 Per Cent Steel Margin.

Public works regulations provide American-made materials costing 15 per cent more than foreign-made materials shall be bought in instances in which there are bids from both domestic and foreign sources. The steel makers have complained that this differential is not sufficiently high to exclude foreign steel.

President Roosevelt recently referred to the differential as an added tariff of 15 per cent in favor of American steel makers.

Army Secrets To Be Guarded By New Rules

General Staff Angered at Revelation of Some of Pet Plans.

The Army's latest military secrets are going to be kept "absolutely secret" or the generals at the War Department will know why.

Irritated that a number of pet plans have been revealed while still in the formative and experimental stages, officers of the general staff have revised the regulations concerning "restricted projects."

Under the new rules, approved by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, the chiefs of Air Corps, Ordnance, and other branches engaged in experimental research work are given authority to designate certain projects as "secret and restricted."

Details concerning these projects may not be made public or transferred to any unauthorized person under penalty of fine or imprisonment. Under the espionage law of 1917 violations are declared punishable by a fine of $10,000, two years imprisonment or both.

In case the information is transmitted to a foreign government or its agents so that the weapon might be used against the United States the guilty party would be subject to 20 years imprisonment in peace time and 30 years or death in war time.

As officials put the new regulations into effect they declined to give out information concerning tests of a new ray to detect airplanes or ships at long range. These tests now are being conducted in New Jersey.

In the Loudoun District race for House of Delegates H. C. Thompson, Hillsboro defeated P. J. Coleman, Sterling, by 267 votes. Thompson polled 1,710 votes and Coleman 1,443.

Two close Senate races left the issue very much in doubt. H. H. Walton, of Mineral, and Bernard Coleman, of Fredericksburg, were running neck and neck in the twenty-seventh District composed of Spottsylvania, Louisa, Orange, Stafford and Fredericksburg.

G. E. Heller was giving Senator Hunter Miller a close race in the twenty-second, or Rockbridge, Bedford and Buena Vista district.

Senator Charles E. Burks defeated Dudley Davis easily in the Lynchburg and Campbell County district.

Walter Scott, member of the House of Delegates from Roanoke City, was defeated for re-election there after a vigorous campaign, with Scott opposing Mayor Sidney Small's proposal for "home rule" under which the city council instead of the State compensation board would fix the salaries of constitutional officers in the city. Ray O. Lawson and M. S. Battle were nominated to represent the city in the House.

At Portsmouth Robert W. Moffatt, incumbent for the House, tonight conceded the nomination of Maxey and Carr.

Selassie Holds Italian Attack Is Due in Month

'We Are Ready,' Emperor Says; Will Lead Troops Into Battle.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 6.—"We expect Italy to attack within a month and we are ready," Emperor Haile Selassie I said in an exclusive interview today.

A simple man, with the fingers of an artist and the face of a zealot, the Emperor asserted that if war comes after he has exhausted every effort for peace, he will lead his troops into battle himself.

Men drilled in the distance outside the impressive, greystone imperial palace as the Conquering Lion of Judah, discarding his field marshal's uniform for a turban and flowing robe, pondered the plight of his people and then gave earnest, straight-forward answers to questions.

Discussing his almost fanatical stand for Ethiopian freedom, the Emperor was asked about the reported project for an international mandate by the League of Nations over Ethiopia.

"The League on many occasions has rendered valuable economic and social aid to its members without restricting their independence in any respect," he answered. "We would not refuse such assistance."

Asked if he had received assurance of Japanese support, he replied, in the soft Amharic language of Ethiopian officialdom, "none."

"Will you lead your troops in event of war with Italy" he was asked.

Won't Avoid "Sacred Task."

"Ethiopian tradition and the constitution we gave our people require the emperor to be commander-in-chief of the army," he said with full consciousness of his imperial position. "We neither intend nor desire to avoid performance of any part of our sacred task—the defense of our liberty and our territory," the emperor then became a soldier for a few minutes. He refused to reveal the number of men available to fight under his standards. "No military information can be disclosed."

Asked about the role of women in war, he said, "Ethiopian tradition will be followed. When war comes Ethiopian women will accompany the army. They will prepare food and nurse the wounded."

Talk turned to reports that the Greek and Roman Catholic Churches may be expected to use their influence for peace in behalf of one of the earliest Christian nations.

"We suppose the attitude of all churches favors a peaceful solution," the emperor said, with a touch of wistfulness.

Inquiry regarding arms embargoes drew the sharp comment: "By the irony of circumstances, the embargo hampers the only country which from the first has devoted all efforts to assuring a peaceful settlement. We have not yet sought to purchase anything for which we are unable to pay. We have no intention of departing from this policy."

Red Cross Movement.

Replying to questions concerning International Red Cross assistance, Selassie said:

"The Ethiopian National Red Cross is in the process of organization. It will arrange collaboration with other Red Cross units."

In this connection he was asked whether it would be difficult to restrain the wilder Ethiopian tribes from the mutilation of captives.

"No," was the answer. "It will not be difficult."

Conversation then turned to repeated hopes for peace.

"We have never ceased our endeavors to assure a peaceful settlement," the emperor continued. "I am loath to believe these efforts will fail.

"No special mental preparation is necessary for our people to resist attack. We know we must face the modern equipment of our possible adversary. That will not deter the Ethiopian people from the sacred task of defending their liberty and their territory.

"Slavery is being abolished as rapidly as is consistent with social and economic progress."

He gave assurance of Ethiopia's readiness for an inquiry on the spot by any impartial organization.

The monarch then left the palace to address the inaugural meeting of the Ethiopian Red Cross, founded July 8.

"Our presence at this meeting shows the importance of Red Cross work," Selassie told his people. "I urge you all to do everything possible to aid."

Rain drummed on the tent in which the meeting was held. High officers of the church, the army and the government were present at the feet of the Emperor, who presided from a gilded chair. Beside him stood one of his two liqamaquas—traditional wearers of the Emperor's clothes in battle.

League of Nations Council session of last week.

Great Ethiopian military preparations also are under way, a dispatch from Addis Ababa to the newspaper Popolo di Roma, said today. It reported "great concentration" of troops near the frontier.

There were renewed attacks in the press today upon Great Britain because of its attitude toward the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel.

The authoritative writer, Virginio Gayda, in the Giornale d'Italia said Il Duce's military program in East Africa is "inflexible." He attacked both the League and Britain.

The Giornale d'Italia said the government had received applications for enlistment from more than 10,000 Italians living abroad.

Dispatches from Naples indicated four transports would embark the next few days carrying more than 2,000 troops, an equal number of skilled workmen, modern tanks and other war equipment to East Africa.

The newspaper La Tribuna called the order proof that "military order is the sole guarantee," adding that communique No. 9 "constituted the best comment which can be made on those so-called deliberations at Geneva."

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 6.—A dispatch to Le Matin from Asmara, Eritrea, today reported a threatened revolt against Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia by his son, Asfao Tafari, governor of Wollo Province.

Ethiopian caravan drivers were quoted as saying that Prince Asfao was angry because his younger brother, Makonnen, was appointed governor of Harrar Province, making him next in importance to the emperor.

Asfao also was reported opposed to the imprisonment of former Emperor Lidj Jassou.

The reported revolt was said to be the reason the emperor is keeping his Imperial Guards, best trained among his troops, at Addis Ababa instead of sending them toward the frontier.

Contrasting the spirit of solidarity among the 21 New World nations with international wrangling "in another part of the world," Secretary Hull yesterday said the way now is open to banish war eternally from this hemisphere.

Addressing diplomatic representatives of the Pan-American countries gathered at luncheon to celebrate the 110th anniversary of Bolivia's independence, Hull replied to a welcome by Dr. Enrique Finot, Bolivian Minister.

Hull stressed the successful united effort of the American governments to restore peace between Bolivia and Paraguay in the Chaco dispute.

"This example of Pacific settlement of controversaries between two nations," he said, "coming as it does at an acute stage of strained relations in another part of the world, should afford genuine encouragement to peace advocates and peace lovers there and everywhere."

Striker Killed In French Riot On Wage Cuts

wounded in clashes in the Rue Siam and in two minor disorders which broke out near the maritime barracks.

Police Commissioner Chalmel was wounded.

Renewed wage-cut demonstrations began in the early morning, when maritime arsenal workers walked out. Serious clashes with the police followed immediately. Maritime authorities ordered the arsenal closed until restoration of order.

Two hundred workers toiling on construction of the new cruiser Dunkerque put down their tools suddenly and joined 10,000 demonstrators from neighboring shops. Workers in another section of the town attempted to join the manifestations, but police and mobile guards intervened.

Missiles Hurled.

Many were injured when demonstrators began hurling rocks, bricks and other missiles. Several suffered fractured skulls.

Republican guards were summoned from Mantes. Workers tried to block passage of their trucks, resulting in other clashes for which the workers had armed themselves with bottles and stones.

Fighting continued unabated in late afternoon. Heavy forces of police, troops and mobile guards succeeded in clearing the section near the arsenal barracks after hand-to-hand fighting.

Spreads to Clichy.

Simultaneously 500 bus company workers gathered in the suburb of Clichy. A riot squad, summoned hastily, dispersed them before they were able to demonstrate against their slimmer pay envelopes.

At 8 p. m. authorities announced order restored completely.

Casualties stood at one demonstrator dead, one Mobile guardsman critically hurt, four gendarmes seriously injured and several soldiers wounded. Many demonstrators were injured, but the exact number was undetermined because many were treated privately.

Moscow Speech Hits 100% Americans; Follows Foster Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 6.—Creation of a workers' and farmers' party in the United States to prevent the rise of Fascism was declared a vital necessity not only for America but for the world today by Georgi Dimitrov, Bulgarian Communist, before the seventh congress of the Third Internationale.

"A victory for Fascism in America would mean a strengthening of the regime of exploitation and the movement for crushing the workers," he declared.

"This would have a profound effect on the world as a whole."

If Fascist doctrines are allowed to continue penetrating the masses disapponited with the two major parties, Democratic and Republican, Fascism will become a "serious and immediate threat," Dimitrov said.

Advocates Third Party.

In these circumstances, he declared, American workers and farmers must abandon the "capitalistic parties" and steer the masses away from Fscism into a new party which would be "neither Socialist nor Communist, but must be anti-Fascist and not anti-Communist."

Dimitrov said the party must war on banks, trusts and monopolies; must fight for unemployment insurance, abolition of farmers' debts and equality rights for Negroes; demand satisfaction of war veterans' needs and defend the interests of professions, small merchants and manual laborers.

This party, he asserted, must be the third party in America instead of the Fascist Party, and must name candidates for the Senate and House.

Urges Mass Meetings.

He urged peoples' mass meetings in America to lay the foundation for the party.

His recommendations followed closely the outline of a movement for the third party given by William Z. Foster, former Communist candidate for President of the United States, in a recent article in the magazine of the Communist Internationale.

Dimitrov described American fascism as "fascism in disguise" and representing itself as 100 per cent Americanism, but following the same general lines as fascism abroad.

Recalling the legend about the use of a wooden horse to mislead the defenders of Troy, the speaker said "revolutionary workers must not hesitate to use similar tactics when dealing with Fascist enemies, who protect themselves against the people behind a living wall of cutthroats."

House Passes Bill For Henry Shrine

The Burch-Glass bill for a national monument shrine at Red Hill, last residence of Patrick Henry, was passed yesterday by the House and sent to the White House for presidential approval, according to the Associated Press.

The bill provides that when the Red Hill property, in Charlotte County, Va., is conveyed to the Federal Government it is to be made a monument under the National Park Service. The monument would include the Henry law office and the grave of the fiery Virginia statesman.

Wheat Price Inquiry Nears End in Virginia

The Department of Justice yesterday indicated its agents investigating reports of collusion in Virginia to force down the price paid to wheat growers in the State were nearing the end of their inquiry, according to the Associated Press. The investigation has been in progress nearly two weeks.

It was started after reports that prices for Virginia-grown wheat were being forced down through collusion and that importation of flour made of Western wheat was having its effect on prices for the home-grown crop.

A. F. of L. Urges Roosevelt Act To Curb Italy

Green to Ask President to Try to Prevent War in East Africa.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, Aug. 6.—The American Federation of Labor executive council directed William Green today to appeal to President Roosevelt to try to stop the threatened Ethiopian war. The federation president said he would carry the appeal to the White House as soon as he returned to Washington from the council's quarterly meeting here.

"From all the facts and information available there seems to be no justification for a war of aggression on the part of Italy and for the invasion of Ethiopian territory," the council said in a statement. "The council is of the opinion that Ethiopian sovereignty should be respected, that the people of Ethiopia should be permitted to enjoy all their territorial rights and that under no circumstances should they be required to cede any part of their territory through threat of invasion or through resort to force.

To Call on Workers.

"The executive council will appeal to the Government of the United States to utilize all influence at its command to prevent the threatened war between Italy and Ethiopia. Furthermore, the council directed that working people everywhere be called upon to protest against the war preparations of Italy and its threat to invade Ethiopia.

"The council was influenced to express itself in this threatened war situation not only for humanitarian reasons, but because of the grave international complications which might seriously threaten the peace of the entire world."

A hearing on a dispatch between the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Journeymen Tailors over which union should take in the tailors who altered ready-made clothes in men's stores and a start on the council's report to the federation's October convention occupied the council most of the day.

New Unit Planned.

Green said the council expected to hear tomorrow from a conference of needle trades union leaders on formation of a needle trades department within the federation.

A new drive to get buyers throughout the country to insist they receive goods marked with the union label, to start Labor Day, was announced by Matthew Woll, president of the label trades department, after a meeting of his executive council.

With the disappearance of the Blue Eagle, NRA's compliance emblem, Woll said, the union label gave the buyer his only assurance that his purchases did not come from sweat shops.

West Pointers See Bombers Blast Crater

Army Cadets Watch Exhibit of Latest in Modern War Machines.

By the Associated Press.

Fort Benning, Ga., Aug. 6.—Dropping explosive bombs weighing 100 and 300 pounds, the Army's huge bombers today simulated an attack on a wagon train and blasted out deep craters in the ground as 44 planes staged a demonstration for the West Point senior class.

The cadets are here for a two weeks' tour of duty witnessing demonstrations of the latest in modern weapons of war.

The planes were brought here from Langley Field, Va., and Barksdale Field, Shreveport, La. An attack squadron opened the aerial show with withering blasts of machine gun fire on ground targets. This was followed closely by the dropping of 30-pound fragmentation bombs that made sieves of the targets.

Another attack squadron's dropping of parachute dummy bombs—one of the largest of weapons from the air—was the highlight of the show with the exception of the operations of the big bombers. Eleven planes, flying only about 50 feet off the ground, tossed out over 90 of the parachute bombs and flashed quickly out of similated danger.

The bombardment group, high above the ground, furnished a spectacular event in the bombing of a "wagon train," shaking the terrain like thunder as the 100 and 300 pound bombs blasted out craters, sending dirt and debris fountaining into the air.

Detroit Hints Meat Boycott Backed by Reds

Police Probe Butcher's Plea 'Strike' of Housewives Is National Move.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 6.—Police investigators looked into a charge today by butchers that Detroit's stormy meat strike is part of a Nation-wide campaign inspired by Communist agitators.

Police Commissioner Heinrich A. Pickert ordered the investigation after the Red charge, raised repeatedly by butchers, who say the housewives' militant boycott has resulted in the loss of "tons of meat," was echoed by representatives of Chicago packers, who came here to help local dealers.

Emil Schwartz, director of the National Retail Dealers Association, said today that 75 per cent of the butcher shops in Hamtramck and some other strike centers in the city were closed for the duration of the boycott.

"The strike is worse in the Polish districts," he said. "Less than 25 per cent are affected in other sections of the city."

The Women's League Against the High Cost of Living went forward today with plans to unify the scattered groups of strikers while the dealers' committee of 11 sought means to end the protracted boycott.

There was no picketing, but sales in the affected areas were few.

Chester C. Davis, agricultural adjustment administrator, replied hotly today to the assertion of some Detroit packers that AAA processing taxes are largely responsible for existing meat prices.

"Reports indicate that the packers are playing both sides of the street in their arguments about who pays the processing tax," he said.

"Meat packers to date have filed 300 suits for recovery of hog processing taxes * * * upon the theory that the packers, not the consumers, are paying the tax. In answer to consumer protests, they pass out the story that the consumers pay the tax, and the tax is the cause of higher meat prices. The AAA wanted to take such representations to consumers at face value * * * but the packers didn't like that either."

The Communist charge was first leveled at the striking housewives when literature explicitly outlining a "plan of action" appeared mysteriously in the headquarters of the women's action committee in the International Workers Hall. The charge is denied by Mrs. Mary Zuk, leader of the strike.

Keep Constitution, McReynolds Warns

Supreme Court Justice Pleads for Loyalty.

By the United Press.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 6.—A plea for loyalty to the Constitution as the "foundation of our Government" was voiced by Justice James Clark McReynolds, of the United States Supreme Court, in a copyrighted interview with the Beverly Evening Times today.

"The Constitution has carried us along through 148 years and now, with unrest troubling throughout the world, is no time to make a change," said Justice McReynolds, who is a summer guest at the Gloucester estate of Mrs. Joseph Leander Loose. Recalling Abraham Lincoln's advice, he said:

"The middle of the stream is a poor place to swap horses."

"The Constitution," the Justice concluded, "is the foundation of our Government and we must abide by it. Enforcement of its principles is necessary for recovery."

Justice McReynolds said there was need for brains and character in politics today, among both young and old, and "any man who can not abide by his promises has no place in politics."

Detroit Suspect Sought Papers, Girl Testifies

Schweitzer Knew of Dickinson's Business Affairs, She Hints.

By the United Press.

Detroit, Aug. 6.—William Schweitzer was seeking "some important papers" the night that Howard Carter Dickinson was robbed and slain, one of four defendants testified today in the trial for the murder of the prominent New York attorney.

She was Florence Jackson, 24, cabaret entertainer. Her testimony injected into the trial a hint that the business that brought Dickinson to Detroit was known to Schweitzer. The attorney, a nephew of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, of the Supreme Court, came here in connection with a proposed suit against the $40,000,000 estate of the late William Yawkey, lumber king.

Wanted to Go Back.

"When we drove away from the place where Dickey was killed, Bill (Schweitzer) said: 'Well, I couldn't find the papers I wanted,'" she testified. "He said something about going back to his room looking for them."

Her testimony recalled the intensive search for the slayers of the attorney, whose body was found in Rouge Park on June 26; the disappearance of his brief case and its return to a hotel checkroom; and the State's contention that robbery was the motive behind the murder of the mild-mannered lawyer.

Dickinson, Schweitzer himself testified, met the the girls in a hotel dining room, struck up an acquaintance. The following night he accompanied them and Schweitzer on an automobile ride. Schweitzer said it was climaxed by Dickinson taking his own life. The State contends that Schweitzer deliberately shot Dickinson with the knowledge of the women.

Tells of Flight.

The woman told the story of her life and rapidly led up to the slaying of Dickinson on June 26. Pale and nervous, she told how Schweitzer and the other defendants fled to Chicago and Fort Wayne, Ind., where they were arrested.

"Bill told us to shut up," she testified. "He said 'I've got two bullets left in this gun and nobody is going home.'"

Schweitzer listened to her testimony with a smirk. A few minutes before, he had shouted denials from the witness stand that he murdered Dickinson.

"I didn't say Dickinson committed suicide," the dapper defendant shouted at Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea. "I said it was either suicide or accidental. The gun went off in his hands. I couldn't tell what happened."

Tipster Says Murder 'Story' Was Plotted to Swing Election

Mary Baker Slaying Story 'Political Hoax' to Lessen Chances of Sheriff Fields, Fritz Says; Denial Is Made.

On a promise that he "would be taken care of" after yesterday's primary elections in Arlington County, Walter U. Fritz, 37, slim, outspoken Virginia mechanic, agreed to play the central role in a weird political hoax by "exposing" undisclosed details of the baffling Mary Baker murder case.

He admitted this yesterday to a roomful of reporters, detectives and Federal agents at Police Headquarters. He told of a carefully planned plot, allegedly engineered by H. J. Odenthal, candidate for sheriff in the primary elections, and designed as a political blow at Sheriff Howard Fields, re-election candidate.

He said the scheme was concocted less than three weeks ago, with plans to "spring" the story before 3 p. m. Monday. It was about this time that Fritz was arrested as he stepped from a telephone booth in Union Station.

According to police investigators Odenthal "tipped them off" that Fritz was calling his home from the Union Station telephone. After his arrest, Fritz was grilled for several hours. He finally "broke" and told of the plot, shortly after noon yesterday.

But instead of revealing "undisclosed details" of the Mary Baker murder, Fritz accused Odenthal of plotting to throw a "political bombshell" into the county elections.

In his statement to police, Fritz related that Odenthal devised the plan to "turn taxpayers and voters against the office of Sheriff Fields."

"The whole thing is just a hoax," Fritz declared. "I was to make up a story and place the actual murder of Mary Baker in Arlington County. If this succeeded in defeating Sheriff Fields, Odenthal said he would take care of me after his election."

Fritz admitted he had known Odenthal but three weeks. He said that after the alleged plot was agreed to, he made three telephone calls to the Odenthal home in Arlington County. He used the name of "John Pryor Cowen" and told Odenthal he "knew something" about the Baker murder mystery. It was while he was making the final call that he was apprehended.

Fritz said he didn't know that Odenthal planned to have him arrested, but that he "had a funny feeling that something might happen. He quoted Odenthal as setting 3 p. m. Monday as deadline for the hoax story or "it won't do much good."

It was Fritz, back in 1930 during the murder investigation, who implicated Herman Barrere, an itinerant painter, in the slaying. Barrere was arrested in Canada, but proved an alibi and was released.

Fritz Released After Story.

It was learned yesterday that the planned hoax story was to have run like this: Fritz was to tell of hearing a shot fired in the vicinity of Arlington Memorial Bridge on the night of the murder in April, 1930. He was to tell, according to one version of the story, of seeing several men fighting and later of seeing them place something that looked like a body in an automobile. This would place the actual slaying on Arlington County soil. After making his statement, Fritz was released.

Soon after his release at headquarters, Fritz appeared at a polling place in Virginia Highlands. Sheriff Fields later announced that Fritz had voted for him. The erstwhile prisoner was released shortly after 2 p. m. and lost no time in casting his vote.

At the time of the murder, Fritz was employed on the Carter estate, not far from where Mary Baker's body was found in a culvert on Military road.

Mary Baker, young Government worker, disappeared while walking near the Ellipse after finishing work in the Navy Department. She was found ravished, shot and beaten.

Mr. Odenthal last night denied emphatically that he intended to make election capital out of Fritz's arrest in connection with the Baker case. He said that he had never seen Fritz before he was brought into police headquarters on Monday and denied that he had made Fritz any promise.

Odenthal told reporters that he first received the tip several weeks ago when his wife, received an anonymous phone call from a man who alleged that he was a witness to the murder. The man called again and Odenthal talked to him.

Unable to decide what action to take, Odenthal said he conferred with Former Commonwealth's Attorney, William C. Gloth, who advised him to inform Inspector Burke of what had happened. This was done, Odenthal said, the arrest of Fritz resulting when his phone call from Union Station was traced by detectives.

Five Convicts Are Recaptured After Escape

By the Associated Press.

Fulton, Mo., Aug. 6.—Five of six criminally insane convicts who overpowered two guards and fled from the State hospital here Saturday, were back in the prison ward tonight, while officers carried on a relentless search for the sixth, believed hiding a few miles from here.

A manhunt through the woods of central Missouri ended today when four of the fugitives, characterized as "desperate" by hospital authorities, surrendered meekly to detachments from a posse of 50 State and county officers.

Another returned to the hospital voluntarily a few hours after the escape.

Search for the fleeing criminals was concentrated in a narrow strip of Missouri River lowland woods this morning when a Negro watchman reported seeing the men attempt to board a St. Louis-bound train there.

After hours of dodging into the underbrush to avoid capture, Oliver Hamilton, former "cuckoo" gangster from St. Louis serving a life term for a double killing, and Edward Leroy Marcum, convicted St. Louis robber, surrendered.

Two hours later Paul E. McCarick and William Smith surrendered to possemen near where Hamilton and Marcum had been captured. McCarick had been described by prison officials as the leader of the escape. The four men said they had not seen George R. Rogers, still at large, since the escape.

Man Shoots Self After Killing Two

By the Associated Press.

Beloit, Kans., Aug. 6.—Ralph James, 35-year-old former convict, today shot and killed his father-in-law and mother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Gould, probably fatally wounded his estranged wife, Helen Gould James, and then killed himself.

James entered a restaurant operated by the Gould family and when his estranged wife appeared he fired a pistol bullet through her shoulder. He then went to the kitchen and fired upon Mrs. Gould, the bullet striking her in the breast. Gould was shot through the lungs.

James then turned the gun on himself.

The shooting was said by friends of the Goulds to have been the outgrowth of a family quarrel.

Bauer Slaying Guilt in Court Suspect Denies

Murder of Love Rival Is Charged to Carpenter in Doctor's Death.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Haggard and unshaven, Mandeville W. Zenge, Canton, Mo., carpenter, pleaded innocent in felony court today of the slaying of his love rival, Dr. Walter J. Bauer, by mutilating him with a pocket knife.

Zenge was arraigned on a charge of first degree murder before Judge Austin F. McCarthy after police had tried unsuccessfully for five days to "crack" his story that he did not perform the crude operation on Dr. Bauer, a Kirksville, Mo., osteopath chemist, nor even know him. Judge McCarthy continued the case until August 29 and placed Zenge in custody of the sheriff.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Louise Schaffer Bauer, wife of the slain man who for several years prior to her marriage kept company with Zenge, appeared before the grand jury investigating the slaying. She emerged from the jury room 30 minutes later, her eyes red from weeping.

In an interview after his arraignment the lanky 26-year-old carpenter asserted the appearance of his rival's widow before the jury did not worry him.

"I'm not worried about anything she can say," said Zenee, "I don't hold anything against Louise. I want her to be happy for the rest of her life."

The widow appeared anything but happy as she sat in a chair in the rand jury ante-room while her brother-in-law, Joseph Bauer, of Cleveland, Ohio, attempted to comfort her.

She had intended to leave for her home in Kirksville, Mo., but the State asked her to remain in Chicago. She told prosecutors she had little money and arrangements were made for her to stay at the expense of the State.

Swamp Murder Trial Witness Names Woman

Man Says Mrs. Dunkel Asked Him for Price to Kill Son-in-Law.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—A witness who said he discussed prices and means of murder while dining with Mrs. Blanche Dunkel, 43-year-old grandmother, testified today that the woman offered him $500—half as much as he asked—for killing her son-in-law, Ervin Lang.

Testifying for the State in the trial of Mrs. Dunkel and Mrs. Evelyn Smith, 47, for Lang's "torso" slaying, the witness, R. F. Culler, 52, said he accepted $30 from Mrs. Dunkel after discussing "doing the job," but later advised her to drop her plans and "let Lang go."

Lang was later killed, allegedly by Mrs. Smith, and his torso and legs were hidden in a swamp near Hammond, Ind. Their discovery led to the arrest of Mrs. Dunkel here and Mrs. Smith in New York and their reputed confessions that one arranged and the other committed the strange slaying.

Culler, a boiler maker, told the court, Mrs. Dunkel demanded "When are you going to kill Lang?" several times following their first meeting. Finally, he said, he advised Mrs. Dunkel to "let him go."

William Lang, a brother of the victim, described threats he said Mrs. Dunkel made against Ervin and the latter's fiancee.

Mrs. Dunkel came to his apartment, he said, and expressed suspicion that Ervin—whose wife, Mrs. Dunkel's daughter, died last December—was meeting his fiancee, Miss Josephine McKinley, secretly.

"I'll kill them both if I ever catch them together," the witness said Mrs. Dunkel told him.

Wife Released In Man's Death At Belle Haven

became frightened. Mrs. Elliot tried to call the police, but the line was dead. Later police found the wires cut.

Mrs. Yakel told the coroner she dressed as rapidly as she could and ran from the house by the rear door to hide under a bush in a neighbor's yard. Then, she said, her husband kicked in the glass of the door and rushed into the house to hunt for her.

When he did not find her, she said, he ran out again, got into his car and drove around the block several times. Again he stopped, she said, and left his car to look for her in the surrounding grounds. He had a flashlight, which finally found her in the neighbor's yard. He ran toward her.

What he did not know was that Mrs. Yakel had a gun, a .32-caliber revolver she had borrowed only a short time before. She said she called to him to stop, warned him she was armed. When he continued toward her, she said, she fired above his head; but he continued. The flashlight blinded her when she fired again, she declared.

Meanwhile police had received a call that there was trouble at the Yakel address, and were on their way there. When they arrived Mrs. Yakel was sitting on the lawn of the neighbor's home and her husband was lying nearby. She was calm, they said, or dazed. Her first words were:

"I didn't mean to kill him. Is he dead? I think I hit him."

She had hit him. There was a bullet in his heart.

After the hurried questioning concerning the details of the shooting and the events leading up to it, Mrs. Yakel told the unhappy story of her married life.

Two years ago, she said, Yakel brought her to the suburban home, with her mother and the little daughter. Their amity lasted only a short time, she said, because he was insanely jealous. He accused her of "running" with other men. Finally, he even denied he was the father of the baby she found she was going to have.

She said he ordered her and her mother and little daughter out of his home, but that she refused to go. Then he left her, saying he intended to get a divorce.

While in Reno, she asserted, he wrote her letters threatening to kill her if she did not leave the home. County police said the sheriff's office received a letter from him asking that Mrs. Yakel be evicted.

A week ago Mrs. Yakel appealed to police for protection from her absent husband. At that time she feared he would kill her.

She said she had learned that several years ago he was an inmate of a Maryland institution for mental cases.

The pretty blonde young widow was formerly the wife of Don Lee, of Falls Church, an employe of a motor company here.

Frantic efforts were made by Mrs. Yakel's attorney, Andrew Clark, also a circulation department employe of a Washington newspaper, to guard her from photographers. She was taken to the coroner's hearing in an undertaker's car, and left the rear entrance in the same car, lying on the floor. Clark became aggressive when news cameramen attempted to take pictures of her.

Mrs. Yakel refused to talk to reporters and returned to the suburban home where the shooting occurred a few hours before, to answer all queries with the information that she "wanted to get some sleep."

Weinman Freed In Alexandria Assault Cases

Judge Refuses to Believe Witnesses' 'Illogical' Testimony.

Sidney Weinman, president of the Century Manufacturing Co., was acquitted in Alexandria Police Court yesterday on four charges of assault brought by striking women employes of his shirt factory.

In dismissing the charges against Weinman, Justice James Reese Duncan delivered an address from the bench in which he declared, among other things, that in his opinion the manufacturer had not received the police protection to which he was entitled.

The four bringing the assault charges showed bruises and a physician testified that he treated one of them for bruises to her chest and shoulder.

Judge Duncan, said the charge could not have been true, that it was illogical because no man would have charged a mob with his fists. He said he did not believe the manufacturer acted as the witnesses testified.

Weinman said he was terrified by "demonstrations and threats made against him, though Mayor E. C. Davison and Police Capt. Arnold and several other witnesses testified that the police protection was all it could have been under the circumstances and that the shirt company head was at no time in danger of personal violence.

Fire Squad Fights To Save Md. Child

Whooping Cough Victims Believed Improving.

Marked improvement in the condition of 5-month-old Donald Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Smith, 303 Cedar avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was reported last night. Members of the Takoma Park Rescue Squad still were administering oxygen. The child has whooping cough.

The Chevy Chase Rescue Squad yesterday replenished the waning supply of oxygen after a call from the Takoma firemen. A relative gave blood for transfusion and the attending physician, Dr. F. X. Richardson, now believes the child has a chance to live.

Administration of the oxygen must be continued constantly, however, until the child is out of danger, it was said. Members of the squad who are in attendance are Chief Leo Moffett, Assistant Chief Stephen LaScola, William Flagg, Ralph Harries and William Denekan.

Dr. Huddleson Renominated; Margin Narrow

Miss Edith Rogers First Woman Victor for Fairfax Office.

Dr. F. W. Huddleson, of Fairfax, was renominated for his present post as county treasurer by a narrow margin of slightly over 200 votes over C. C. Carr, of Fairfax County, Va., Democrats turned out in numbers greater than anticipated in their primary election.

The most unusual feature of the voting was the fact that the Dranesville District selected Miss Edith Rogers, of Floris, its candidate for supervisor over three male opponents. As the Democratic nomination in the county is tantamount to election, Miss Rogers will be the county's first woman supervisor.

John W. Rust, of Fairfax, running for renomination as State Senator, polled a substantial plurality in the county, getting 2,050 votes. His major opponent, Hugh Reid, of Cherrydale, polled 1,022.

The fight for nomination as commonwealth's attorney proved a walkaway for Judge Paul E. Brown of the county court. According to unofficial results, Judge Brown received 2,288 votes to 1,054 for George B. Robey, of Fairfax.

Closest Race.

The fight for supervisor in the Falls Church district proved the closest race of the election. Although the unofficial count showed that C. H. Powell, of Bailey's Cross Roads, had 234 votes to 232 for J. A. Kerns, of Falls Church, it was conceded that Powell, the incumbent, might be defeated when the official result is announced.

Miss Rogers polled 289 votes in the race for supervisor in the Dranesville district. The voting for her rivals was as follows. George F. Harrison, of Herndon, 134; E. E. Gillette, of Herndon, 73, and T. A. Wamsley, of Floris, 167.

Carper Is Victor.

In Providence District G. Wallace Carper, the incumbent, of McLean, scored a decisive victory over his opponent, O. B. Campbell of Fairfax, 814 to 294 in the race for supervisor.

The incombents in both the Mount Vernon District and the Centerville District won the supervisor nomination. In the former district, W. F. P. Reid of Groveton polled 240 to 167 for J. A. Parnell of Franconia. In the latter, D. W. Buckley of Clifton had 150 votes to 126 for J. A. Ferguson of Centerville, and 131 for R. Colton Lewis of Clifton.

Mr. Huddleson's opponents in the voting for county treasurer were C. C. Carr of Fairfax and Orlando W. Whitley of McLean. Huddleson had 1,448 votes to 1,214 for Carr, and 688 for Whitley.

6-Month Sentence Ends Speculation

Jennings Briggs, colored, went to jail for six months on larceny charges yesterday.

He went after Police Court Judge Robert Mattingly hesitantly sentenced him; after a policeman pleaded for leniency for him and after the prosecuting witness, a Chinese restaurant proprietor, "couldn't say" whether he suspected the man.

Briggs was accused of stealing a quantity of cigarettes and $2 in cash from the restaurant of Sam Shen, 7 F street northwest. He had been employed by Shen for two years. He denied the charge and said that he had never been arrested before.

Policeman A. R. Houch, of the First Precinct, asked Judge Mattingly to place Briggs on probation. The policeman said Briggs had a wife and small child and he was their only support.

After hearing testimony in the case, Judge Mattingly offered to allow Briggs to be retried by a jury. While the colored man debated the question with his attorney, Judge Mattingly suddenly changed his mind and sentenced Briggs to jail.

Mills And Millions.

The Treasury is deeply concerned about the problems of change-making in those States which have sales taxes based on a percentage of the purchase price. Rather than permit the distributor to charge his customer a full cent additional, to cover a sales levy of less than that amount, some of the States have been considering the coinage of fractional money for local circulation. The Treasury rightly objects that such action would be an unconstitutional exercise of the congressional power to coin money and regulate the value thereof. Hence it proposes to satisfy the demands of the States in question by urging the passage of a law authorizing the Federal Government to manufacture half-pennies and mills.

This official eagerness to protect consumers from losing the fraction of a cent is in ludicrous contrast with the Administration's open-handed method of disbursing billions of dollars of public funds obtained through taxes and loans. Indeed, there is excellent material for the pen of a satirist in the solemn conferences now in progress between representatives of the Treasury and of Congress over the form of the bill authorizing the issuance of midget money. The form of the projected coins, it appears, has already been settled by President Roosevelt. This is a pity. It would have been a swell subject for a boondoggling competition.

The United States has never had a coin as small as a mill, although there was certainly more need for it in the early days of the republic, when prices were lower and cash incomes extremely small, judged by present-day standards. However, it may be argued that the spread of retail sales taxation has invalidated comparison of this sort, since the arbitrary addition of a few mills to the prices paid for taxed goods may amount to a considerable sum in the course of a year.

But that is only one side of the picture. Against the doubtful benefits to consumers of a fractional currency must be offset the complications in making change, the distracting effect upon clerical forces, the loss of time in completing transactions and the new accounting problems created. There is excellent reason to conclude that the advantages of a fractional currency would be outweighed a thousand times by the colossal annoyances resulting from its introduction.

Retail sales taxes have already increased the complexities of everyday life by adding odd cents to the purchase price of a heterogeneous list of articles. The obvious way to meet the change problems created by such taxes is for the States to amend their laws, wherever necessary, to provide that all payments to cover sales taxes shall be in cents or multiples of cents. Congress can force such action by definitely shelving the Treasury proposal to issue fractional coins.

One Little Word.

The story is told that a certain king in days gone by summoned his wise men and commanded them to gather together all the knowledge of the world and compact it into a form easy for him to digest. The wise men went away and worked for long months, returning at last with a set of tomes such as would overflow a wheelbarrow.

"Too much, too much," cried the king, so once again the wise men repaired to their studies and condensed their information still further. This time they returned with only one volume, yet the king was still dissatisfied. A volume half the size was next produced only to be refused and, following that, another, half again as small. But the king would have none of it.

At last the wise men, in desperation, agreed to summarize their learning in a pellet so small that no man, no matter how busy or lazy, could fail to swallow it. They gathered before the king for the sixth time. "Have ye done my commands?" the king demanded of them. "Yea, sire, that we have," replied the oldest of the wise men. "And what is it this time you've brought?" went on the king. "One word, liege," replied the oldest of the wise men, "only one little word, and that one word is 'if.'"

The wise men of Columbia University have recently accomplished a somewhat similar feat. The range of human knowledge has been set down in 5,000,000 words that take up three and half inches of shelf space in a one-volume encyclopedia, the first of its kind ever produced by an American university, it is said. Having neither pictures nor paragraphs, it presents 52,753 articles written after six years of research and two-years of compilation by a numerous staff. It is published, according to the editor in chief, Dr. Clarke F. Ansley, for "every man except the specialist," and was designed to aid readers of English "bewildered in an age of specialization."

And those who read it will probably still say: "if."

Not Party Politics.

In the latest of his Monday evening radio talks, known locally as "The People's Counsel Mail Bag," Mr. William A. Roberts touched in passing upon an issue of vital importance not merely to Washingtonians, but to all Americans. This occurred when he took up the subject of administrative lobbying, and characterized as absurd "the assertion of some of the utility officials that the Government officers have no more right to participate in the drafting and passing of legislation than do the representatives of corporate interests."

Posed in that form, the subject affords no room for any difference of opinion. Certain utility lobbyists have greatly injured their case by indulging in very questionable tactics while attacking the right and duty of the Administration to direct the legislative arm in behalf of its program. The people's counsel also does well to point out that more rather than less expert administrative guidance is needed by lawmaking bodies, compelled to pass upon many technical measures concerning the background and implications of which their membership is often exceedingly ignorant.

Furthermore, Mr. Roberts bolstered the point he sought to make by saying, very wisely, that "I do not desire to be understood to support the use of administrative pressure to compel passage of legislation." But he would have done better not to have added to this healthy observation the remark that "These are matters of party politics with which I have no concern, and upon which any citizen is entitled to his own opinion."

Strong-arm executive tactics, when used to compel elected representatives to formulate their opinions in rigid accord with the administrative will, are a matter not of party politics, but of deep national concern. To instruct, to explain, even to exhort a Congressman to follow the executive lead is entirely proper. Few will deny that for these purposes we need more rather than fewer contacts between the two branches of government.

But when co-operation between executive and legislature degenerates into arrogant dictation by the former, and slavish submission by the latter, then the whole basis of representative government is undermined. On this there can not be more than one opinion, assuming as a premise that our system of government is on the whole desirable. For only those who in their hearts prefer dictatorship to democracy can argue that it is desirable for the Executive "to compel" the passage of legislation by any form of intimidation, reprisal or threat.

The protests which many thoughtful Democrats have recently made against evidence of executive dictation are not to be taken as meaning any opposition to a closer, above-board, co-ordination of executive planning and legislative review. Such opposition certainly does not exist in the minds of such careful students of government as Representative Huddleston. The protests of men of his type do not deny the problem. They merely repudiate an obviously false solution of that problem. It is unfortunate that the people's counsel of the District of Columbia missed an opportunity to make it clear that better laws will never be secured by applying heat, rather than by divulging light, to lawmakers.

Partial Conversion.

Secretary Wallace's discussion of "The World Cotton Drama" in the current issue of Foreign Affairs is particularly interesting because it coincides with an end-of-the-season report by the New York Cotton Exchange Service and the release of the Department of Commerce's half-year trade statistics.

The exchange report contains emphatic proof that this country is losing a large part of its foreign market for cotton. "Consumption of American cotton in the 1934-35 season," it says, "was the smallest in any season, except one, since 1923-24, and was 4,434,000 bales less than the maximum in past seasons. Consumption of foreign growths in 1934-35, on the other hand, was far and away the largest ever recorded, exceeding the previous maximum by 2,345,000 bales."

The AAA planned its program with little thought of the foreign market which normally absorbs more than half of the cotton crop. Officials insisted that there was nothing to fear from increased foreign competition. Fortunately Secretary Wallace has now changed his mind. In the article referred to he takes note of the expansion of output in India, Brazil and other countries. "The Brazilian government," he says, "seems to be committed to cotton expansion and will undoubtedly push production with great vigor if American cotton prices in the world market are above 12 cents a pound." He even concludes that it would be "the part of wisdom for American cotton producers to keep in mind that country's truly great cotton potentialities."

Since Mr. Wallace has come to recognize the increased foreign output and the price differential between American and foreign cotton, it is rather strange for him to insist that the AAA is not destroying the foreign market for cotton. At first he says reports to this effect are not true. Later he inserts a qualifying statement that "the 12-cent cotton loan may, perhaps, have been too high from the standpoint of exports, but undoubtedly the primary difficulty was the inability of foreign nations to get dollar exchange."

In some countries the difficulty of securing dollar exchange is undoubtedly a factor in the declining shipments of American cotton. But if that is the chief cause for the slump in cotton exports, how does Mr. Wallace explain the decided increase in foreign purchases of finished manufactures from this country? The exchange problem is not confined to a single commodity. The fact that industrial exports have increased while cotton shipments have drastically fallen suggests that cotton must have been subjected to some special handicap. That handicap is readily found, of course, in the artificial prices maintained by the AAA. In these circumstances Mr. Wallace's emphasis upon the dollar exchange thesis appears to be merely an evasion of the real issue.

Where's The Labor Board?

The feverish eagerness of the Administration to secure action upon the Wagner labor disputes bill naturally led to the inference that plans for setting up enforcement machinery were well matured. More than a month has elapsed since the passage of the act and as yet not a single appointment to the National Labor Relations Board has been announced. The delay is certainly not due to lack of need for the much-publicized good offices of the new board, for current industrial relations obviously leave something to be desired.

It begins to look as though the Administration had rushed headlong into an ambitious plan for furthering industrial peace and guaranteeing collective bargaining without paying much attention to the important detail of how the machinery can be made to work. This method of procedure has been followed in drafting a good many New Deal legislative plans which looked magnificent on paper, but fell painfully short of expectations when subsequently put to the test of performance.

The best preventive of legislative exuberance is supplied by a painstaking preliminary study of the administrative aspects of regulatory laws. If the NIRA had been subjected to scrutiny from that point of view, a much less ambitious setup might have been attempted, but the results would probably have been a great deal more permanent. In the case of the Wagner labor-disputes act it is likewise probable that there would have been less pressure for hasty action, and less desire to bestow large and vaguely defined powers upon a new, quasi-judicial agency, if the administrative difficulties of the measure had been previously weighed with a little unemotional realism.

The same heedless pressure for legislative action is now being exerted to secure action upon the Guffey coal bill at this session. It seems a safe guess that if this doubtfully constitutional and extremely controversial bill should come through the legislative hopper there will be the usual delay in setting up a new board and in defining the policies to be followed. Mistakes, conflicts of authority, halting and disappointing performance are part of the price paid for trying to institute reforms before there has been time or opportunity to find out whether the program is administratively feasible. Experience under the Wagner act may again attest the validity of that seasoned adage, "the more haste, the less speed."

With A Sheepskin.

Recently a poll was taken aboard a steamer landing at New York to determine what American points of interest are preferred by European tourists. An overwhelming vote was cast for Coney Island, which would seem to belie the rumors that its glamour is fading. It is not denied that subway trains continue to pour out multitudes of hot and tired city folk seeking brief respite on the beach. But the halcyon days of free spending on sideshows, food and races are definitely past. Apparently this sad state of affairs is not yet known by visitors from abroad, who still think of it as a mecca of unalloyed allurement.

However, these optimistic sightseers won't be wholly disappointed at Coney. They can still gamble at a psuedo-Monte Carlo with nickels, ride on funny imitation canals, smell hamburgers sizzling with onions, and eat salt-water taffy to their hearts' content. But they won't find the expensive restaurants that used to serve Diamond Jim Brady, the magnetic race tracks that drew the elite, or the extravagant shows. Worst of all, they won't find the barker, undoubtedly the most colorful and typical figurehead on the whole island. They'll find him, but alas and alack, he will be in sheep's clothing. Or at least sufficiently educated to be the possessor of a sheepskin.

The barker, ladeez and gintulmen, probably got his name because he does just that. Against the metallic notes of the calliope, the roar of crowds, his voice must rasp to make headway. But it is effective, nevertheless, and even the most uninteresting act takes on magic under his treatment. Not the least thrilling part about him was his appearance. Weather-beaten, flashily dressed, hat pushed over one eye, he was as much a show as those whose talents he extolled.

And now we hear that loud-speakers are replacing the barker at Coney Island. Worse still, a college girl has been hired by one of the sideshows because she is so "refined" looking. Refined, indeed! She may be a smart girl and she may keep the job, but she'll never be a good barker until she learns to talk with a chewed-up cigar in one corner of her mouth.

The will of a rich Californian leaves his body servant $10,000. Who now dares intimate that "no man is a hero to his valet?"

Letters To The Editor.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Musical Note.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Rarely has it been my misfortune to listen to such a magnificent rendering of an otherwise creditable program. When I write "rendering," I mean in the good old sense of rending. It seems a shame that after two fine Sunday performances of the Washington Symphony Orchestra, the people of Washington and elsewhere should be treated to such incapable leadership. I refer to Mr. Ganz. I greatly fear that he is wasting his sweetness on the desert air of symphonic programs when he could be usefully and profitably employed in radio or musical comedy where his theatrical gestures would be appreciated.

He had three chances to show his stuff, the symphony No. 8 in F Major, the Valse Triste and Finlandia. He took Beethoven's symphony and made it as dull and lifeless and uninteresting as a dead ant, the Valse Triste was moderately played, but the Finlandia, he literally tore asunder. It was fine publicity for the orchestra, rendered and punctuated with appropriate crashes and bangs.

It is highly possible that Mr. Ganz took his cue from the program notes to the effect that Finlandia was incidental. He made it so incidental as to be worthless.

While I am on the subject of music, why is it that there is rarely any Bach or Mozart program? Perhaps it is better that while Mr. Ganz is here, none of their fine music is on the programs, that he may not rend it fit for the musical comedy ear and unfit for appreciators of good music.

New Hats In Iran.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the report published in all the newspapers, both in Washington and New York, emanating from Moscow and Turkey, concerning the demonstration at Meshed against the wearing of European hats, which they said resulted in disorder and many deaths, speaking specially of the death of 30 Iranian police, this report is greatly exaggerated.

The people in every part of Iran have received with great pleasure the suggestion of wearing European hats. The incident referred to has to do with a certain mad priest, Shahab, who managed to have a few fanatical, ignorant followers cause some disturbance, which was immediately put down by the police and resulted in the arrest of his followers, two deaths and a few casualties. In the other parts of Iran the people discarded the old Iranian hats with willingness and great pleasure.

A Veteran's Plea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you allow me a small space in your paper in regard to the veterans of the World War and the Spanish-American veterans?

I have noticed in The Post that Congress was going to give back all the money that was taken away from the Spanish-American soldiers and restore their pension and allowance. Why not restore all that was taken away from the World War veterans? We are entitled to as much as the Spanish-American soldiers.

May Congress give us a thought and give us back all that was taken away from us. It will be a big help to some of us.

Abolish All Charity?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why does the President stop with corporations in his proposal to prohibit immoral purchasing of good will by gifts to charity?

When I, as an individual, match my neighbors' contributions to some worthy cause, am I not "purchasing good will" and popular esteem—immunity from the brand of "tightwad" or the suspicion that I am lacking in public spiritedness?

When a philanthropist endows a college, is he not immorally "purchasing good will" for here or for the hereafter?

Why does the President not abolish all charity, all philanthropy at one stroke—instead of slowly drying up the sources? Why not move with one bold step straight to the abundantly regulated and regimented life? Charity and philanthropy are immoral impediments in our swift progress to the Tugwellian Utopia. Away with them—by Executive decree

Dangers Of Boycotting

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Even though we were to grant that any system of boycotting is not distinctly un-American and un-Christian, I still fail to see where Senator King, Mr. Greene et al think they are getting anywhere by renewing war-time hatreds against Germany. Strange that LaGuardia is not concerned at all with the impending brutal ravaging of Ethiopia by Italy—not even to suggest a boycott against her.

I wonder if these politicians are aware of the fact that Germany is one of our best customers, purchasing from us annually a much greater amount of goods then she sells to us, and that by boycotting her we would be destroying an enormous trade—which, by the way, Japan or England would be glad to swipe from us. Also, do these citizens realize that any boycott laid on Germany would also affect the very ones whose cause they espouse.

Only Blue Used Here.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Isn't it about time that something be done about perhaps one of the most insidious forms of Soviet propaganda yet practiced upon an unsuspecting America? I refer, sir, to the red pencil.

Years ago when one had correcting to do a blue pencil was employed and the "editorial blue pencil" became a byword in our language. Today, everywhere I go I am startled to find persons of high and low degree using nothing but red pencils for work for which the blue pencil used to be good enough and very American.

Thanks to the New Deal, we are told, the menace of red ink has been all but eliminated, but the threat to our institutions the Moscow-tinted pencil represents remains unchallenged. And perhaps now we can fathom the foisting to popularity upon our fair ones of the poisonously carmine lipstick.

Wages And National Savings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The caustic denouncement of the new income tax bill by Warren M. Persons, noted economist, should be considered only in the light of another of the attacks on Administration policies, wholly unjustified by current economic theory and fostered by selfish and ignorant class interests.

Mr. Persons holds that the entire fund of capital necessary for the expansion of private industries is secured mainly from individuals having large incomes and corporations having profits. He states that restriction of such accumulations, as would be caused by the imposition of the proposed surtaxes, would be followed by decreased production, higher prices and increasing unemployment.

However, the portion of the national income that is not spent for personal goods to be consumed within a relatively short period is the total fund available for investment in industry. Since the national income is composed not only of the profits of the business men but of the wages and salaries of the working classes, changes in the amount of savings of both groups are of vital importance to the growth of trade and production.

In periods of prosperity the income of business men increases at a great rate. On the other hand, the expenditures of this group fall far behind their increased earnings, so that their savings become exceptionally large. These are reinvested in business, causing a still larger amount of goods to be produced. Thus, through their abnormally large profits, business men cause an increase in production of all commodities, while at the same time producing their relative demand for these very goods.

The earnings of the wage and salaried groups, even in a period of prosperity, do not change materially. Actual figures show that from 1923 to 1929 wages in the manufacturing industries increased 6 per cent, while the output of goods jumped 25 per cent. Thus these classes are not able to increase their expenditures sufficiently to purchase this ever-increasing amount of goods.

The day of settlement finally comes, when business men are no longer able to find markets to absorb their entire production. Prices will fall, trade will slow down, and unemployment will become a national problem.

It may be argued that at present the important question is to increase business, and that this should be done, nothwithstanding any costs we may have to pay in the future. The truth of the matter lies in the fact that the largest portion of the national savings during a depression is actually made by the wage earners. Once business men are assured of a profitable market for their goods, they will borrow this money and expand their activities. This market is being supplied by the Government public works project, which will permit increasing numbers of people to buy goods.

The new income tax laws will prove not only no detriment to trade, but will be one of the means of preventing another boom and depression with its resultant social and economic maladjustments.

The Post Impressionist

At The House Of The Queen.

Post Office, Wednesday.

WHAT though Marie Antoinette's necklace has been stolen from a New York jeweler's shop? Her house still stands serene at Wiscasset, Me.

We know it does. We saw it there, the other day—though, for certain reasons, we did not enter.

* * *

Wiscasset is a forgotten village now, lovely and sleepy, with a deserted blockhouse, the streets lined by memorial elms that meet overhead, and by colonial residences. In respect to these, it is the Georgetown of the Pine Tree State.

And one of them was intended for Marie Antoinette.

* * *

It takes you back to a time out of mind:

When nearby Bath was something of a seaport; when, beyond Bath, the Phippsburg shipbuilders were founding the great American Clipper Tradition; when—across the then wide Atlantic—an Austrian Queen of France drew daily nearer to the revolutionary guillotine.

* * *

The Post-Impressionist doesn't pretend to know the details of the American plot to rescue her. But a conspiracy was formed, with branches here and abroad. Its Paris agents were to hustle the Queen (if one could hustle a Hapsburg), through the insurgent fog to Le Havre. Then hey for the Land of Liberty!

A swift ship from Phippsburg would be hovering off the Norman coast, under command of a Bath skipper, awaiting its royal passenger. To lessen any pursuers' chances, he would make straight for the coast of the U. S. A.—straight for Maine.

There, at Wiscasset (where, if you read The Post's enlightened editorial columns, you know that even starlings are welcome), loyal friends had secured a house for the distressed lady. It was worthy of her. It overlooked the salt water. It looked toward that France whither she would be conducted back in triumph when all these present troubles had been ended . . .

* * *

Well, well: "The best laid plans of mice and men"—and all that sort of thing! We hate to disappoint you, but, believe us or not, Marie Antoinette didn't escape.

* * *

It may have been her prejudice against our Government: Prejudice so opposed to that admiration for the United States which all Hapsburgs have evinced—after all, when things were at their revolutionary worst with Louis XVI she did remark to him that "this is what we get for helping those Americans."

Most likely, however, the failure occurred because the French revolutionaries kept too good guard.

Anyhow, the Phippsburg clipper and her Bath master lingered in vain off inimical Le Havre—until they could linger no longer. They had to return home without their long-expected guest.

So, from the windows of the Marie Antoinette House at Wiscasset no Marie Antoinette ever looked longingly eastward over the salt water, or ever prayed there for help from St. Jude, the patron of causes lost.

* * *

However, as we said, the house itself still stands. It stands there as something of a shrine, albeit, a shrine that was always empty of the relics for which it was intended. Yes, sir: our voting residence is in Sebasco, some 20 miles away. We had never seen the Marie Antoinette House until a month ago. But we did see it then.

Our boss was at Sebasco. He insisted on a sentimental pilgrimage. So we persuaded two Summer Amazons, Harriet and Eleanore, to drive us—though their acquaintance with the Wiscasset was no better than our own—and we took the children.

* * *

The boss loved Wiscasset. We had difficulty in preventing him from fatiguing us by unnecessary exercise afoot through these splendid streets. We had difficulty, also, in finding the Marie Antoinette house.

* * *

"But that must be it," said the boss. He indicated the biggest colonial building in the place, on a height by the very water's edge: old, dignified, a glassed-in balcony giving eastward.

The Amazons tittered that they didn't know for sure.

"Of course, it's the place!" the boss insisted.

So what could we say?

* * *

"Madam," said the boss to the New England lady who answered a gallant pulling of the ancient bell, "I apologize for disturbing you, but I have heard so much about your historic house that I could not leave Maine without trying to view its interior. A house dedicated to such memories, a house that conjures up a royal and unfortunate ghost——"

"If you are talking about the Marie Antoinette House," replied our involuntary hostess, "that's at the other side of the village, where they moved it from where it used to be."

* * *

The boss went into the simple little place, when at last we got there.

We, ourselves, hadn't the requisite heart.

Strange Person, by Choice.

As one who got just a taste of trouping with a carnival company when C. C. Pyle was conducting his two memorable transcontinental bunion derbys, your correspondent can sympathize with Miss Anne Sibley, a Chicago girl, who quit college to join out with a side show which is now playing at Coney Island.

That is the life. True, there is not money in it, and, from the aesthetic standpoint, the carnival trouper is a denizen of art's underworld with nowhere to look but up. But there is a comradeship among the strange people, as the artists took to calling themselves, dropping the word "freak" along about the time the undertakers adopted the term "mortician" and certain members of the real estate business elected themselves charter members of a trade aristocracy, the realtors. Miss Sibley is not herself one of the strange people as yet, being merely a pretty girl, judging from her pictures in the papers, which would make her a strange person in the profession, at that. But she is only 21 and if she is earnest in her ambition to belong, she has an open choice of several specialties. She may get tattooed, buy an outfit of snakes or pick up a stuffed tomcat and an owl from a taxidermist and a crystal ball from an oculist's jobber and become Madam Astra, the fortune-teller who sees all, knows all, for a dime, 10 cents.

BEARDED ladies, rubber-skinned ladies and horse-faced ladies are born, not made, and Miss Sibley, by a regrettable accident of birth, thus may not even aspire to the upper levels of stardom in the side shows. But it is not given to all of us to reach the top, and she may be content to do the best she can under the handicaps which Nature inflicted on her and call it a full life at the end.

They have their own world and even their own press, this latter being the midway and carnival department of the Billboard, in which the artists keep track of one another through the years and around the country. Outsiders are fascinated by the matter-of-fact shop talk of the strange people in their own department of the Billboard, because in its columns they may sometimes find a dead man offered for sale or a notice of a fire-walker or a human ostrich with an appetite for broken glass, bolts, pins and old automobile parts who is at liberty and desires an engagement.

In Mr. Pyle's bunion derby troupes there were a snake charmer, a dead man and a dog-faced man, as well as the champion lady slap-tongue saxophone player of the world and the champion lady bass drummer. The snake charmer's name on the billing was Piu, often mispronounced Pe-yew! with a crinkling of the nose, and though he wore a mother hubbard and a horsetail wig in the snake pit in the evening he was in no way effeminate. Piu, not Pe-yew, drove, the trucks in the day time, helped with the side walls and rigging, threw out over-exuberant townies who created disorder, and shot craps with the touch of a master. The dead man was an Oklahoma chicken thief who had been shot one night when the fowl were roosting high and left in stock in an undertaker's parlor, where, by some accident, he did not mildew but became a "dry one" as the morticians say. He had been trouping for years when Mr. Pyle bought him cheap from the estate of a deceased showman and Mr. Pyle eventually sold him to someone else, complete with fiddle-box coffin, a beautiful hand-painted canvas poster and an outfit of fiction for release to the press, describing him as the Oklahoma outlaw. The lady slap-tongue saxophone player was a great artist, but a pest socially, as she was always bragging, but the lady bass drummer was a genial soul. The night in Trenton she drank some applejack, wrapped her fist in a towel and with one mighty swipe busted the panel in the door of Mr. Pyle's bedroom to demonstrate the power developed by flogging her bass drum.

IN the Chicago World Fair, Mr. Pyle had another troupe and your correspondent understands that he has still another astounding aggregation of exotic educational oddities at the San Diego World Fair at this time. Mr. Pyle started with nickelodeons, took up with Red Grange, went on to the bunion derbys, which were strange enough, goodness knows, but finally found his sphere in life among the strange people. He will never quit them.

Stark tragedy stalked his Chicago exhibition one night when the policeman from India with the moustaches nine feet long had a fight with his Indian manager in the dark and the manager snipped off about eight feet of one moustache. The Indian policeman pined, resigned and started back to India, heartbroken, and a week later there came a dispatch from France, where the boat touched, that he had jumped into the sea and drowned.

Miss Sibley has chosen an interesting career and is more to be envied than pitied by the coeds of her class at Antioch College, who may regard her as a lost sister.

Oliver Herford

By

William Lyon Phelps

THE death of this great humorist on July 5 was a shock to many who quoted his sayings with delight, and a personal loss to a large number of intimate friends.

Had he lived until December, he would have been 72 years old, as he was born in 1863. He studied at the famous Slade School of Art in London and also in Paris.

• • • •

At the turn of the century, there were three humorists whom we often thought of as a group, though, like all humorists, they were individualists—Gelett Burgess, Wallace Irwin, and Oliver Herford. Mr. Herford was a cartoonist, a prolific writer of verse and prose, a dramatist, and a positive genius in conversation, where his spontaneous humor seemed as natural as sunshine.

• • • •

He raised the pun to a very high level of wit. Once, while asking a friend about his summer plans, and learning he was going to sail for Europe, Mr. Herford asked "what ship are you taking?" and the reply was "I am going on the Cedric," pronouncing the "C" like "K". Instantly Herford said, "Oh, don't say that; you'll have a hard "C" all the way across."

• • • •

Mr. Herford is said to have invented the famous phrase that "a woman's mind is cleaner than a man's because she changes it oftener," and of his own wife, with whom he lived happily for more than 30 years, he said she had a "whim of iron."

One of his most frequently quoted sayings is his reply to a back-slapper whose name he could not recall. "I have forgotten your name, but your manners are familiar."

The Dayspring Of Japanese Life

Defense of Emperor Hirohito An Important Factor In Tokyo Plans.

By Frank H. Hedges.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo (By Mail).

TU CHUNG-YUAN, editor of the Hsin Sheng (New Life), a periodical published in Shanghai in the Chinese language, has been sentenced to 14 months' imprisonment and the members of the Nanking Government Board of Censorship have all been forced to resign because the New Life printed an article which the Japanese officially claim is derogatory to the prestige of the Emperor of Japan. Mr. Tu's trial and the resignations come as a result of the demands made by Tokyo through its Ambassador to China.

There have undoubtedly been articles published in the United States, in Great Britain, France and other countries quite as derogatory to His Imperial Majesty as that in the New Life. At times Japan has protested, but has let the matter drop with an official protest. Not so when the incident occurs in China.

It reveals the peculiar light in which Japan regards that vast republic, and it reveals also the Japanese attitude toward their sovereign. Unquestionably Japan no longer looks on China as an independent nation in the sense that the nations of the Western Hemisphere and of Europe are independent. What has taken place in old Manchuria during the past four years is a story known to the world. What is taking place in Hopei Province, which lies immediately south of the Great Wall and adjacent to Manchukuo, is being carried by cable and radio dispatches at present. That important province has come as completely under the domination of Japan as has Manchukuo or Korea.

• • • •

WHAT takes place in Shanghai and the Yangtze Valley and the rest of the territory still under the rule of Nanking is in a different category. Japan acknowledges the independence of all that part of China and only recently raised its legation to the status of an embassy. And yet Japan feels that it has a right to dictate what shall be published there regarding the Japanese sovereign! Probably nothing else could more accurately reveal the Japanese attitude of mind toward China proper. Its independence is respected only as long as that independence does not conflict with Japanese interests.

What Japan's ultimate aims regarding the Yangtze Valley may be are unknown. It is doubtful if they have been worked out by Japan itself. That is, it is doubtful if the Japanese militarists are sure of what their aims may be. The policy of the foreign office is clear enough—one of friendly co-operation with an independent China. But the foreign office is not in control of Tokyo's China policy at present. The course that will be followed will be the course chosen by the militarists.

EMPEROR HIROHITO.

Manchuria. Silence has been maintained regarding the more recent developments in Hopei Province. But if the Japanese military endeavor to bring the rich Yangtze Valley within their sphere of influence they are going to run up against the stone wall of Great Britain, for British interests in that region of China are of great importance to Britain. Unless the Japanese militarists are so drunk with power that they are blind to facts they will realize this and govern themselves accordingly.

• • • •

PERHAPS even more interesting is the light shed by Mr. Tu's conviction on the place of the Emperor in Japanese life. To enter fully into a discussion of that question here would be impossible, but one angle, the angle emphasized by the Tu incident, can not be overlooked.

Since the Meiji restoration of 1868 the Emperor has been the center of political power in Japan. That had not been true for some 1,500 years previously, except that he was nominally acknowledged as such. The empire was governed by a long succession of regents and shoguns, but in each case it was necessary to receive formal appointment from his majesty. The result was that whoever possessed control of the Kyoto palace in which the Emperor lived could receive such an appointment.

The strong feudal families of Japan, each desiring de facto power, battled back and forth among themselves for this control. At one time Takauchi Ashikaga, failing to gain such control, set up another member of the imperial family as emperor and received his appointment from him. Two courts, the northern and the southern, were established, each claiming to be legitimate, and their supporters waged war to the death. Ashikaga was finally defeated and has gone down in Japanese history as the arch traitor of the empire.

When the Tokugawa Shogunate was established in old Yedo, the present Tokyo, a prince imperial was brought to Yedo and installed as Lord Abbot of a famous temple. This was undoubtedly done so that, in event of a break with the Kyoto court, the Tokugawa could proclaim this prince imperial the true emperor and so claim to be acting under imperial decree. Fortunately, when the restoration came, the Rigorous Censorship Over Chinese Articles Is Significant.

• • • •

TODAY, in this modern age, such tactics would not work, of course, but the same principle prevails now just as it has throughout the centuries. The rival forces are the militarists on the one hand and the party politicians, plus the foreign office, on the other. Each side strives to gain the ear of his majesty and to convince the public that it and it alone is carrying out the imperial wishes. The result is a plethora of lese majeste charges.

Baron Kumakichi Nakajimi, minister of commerce, was forced to resign his cabinet post about a year ago when some one dug up the fact that 30 years previously he had written an article which might be interpreted as defending the action of the arch-traitor, Ashikaga. The article was really rather harmless and it had been written in Baron Nakajima's youth, but the cry of lese majeste was raised and the storm that followed was so great the baron had to bow before it. In fact, the incident very nearly wrecked the entire cabinet and would have done so had not the cabinet as a whole been one sponsored by the militarists.

More recently a similar outcry has been heard because Dr. Tatsukichi Minobe wrote that the emperor was the "organ" of the people's will. It has become a major issue in Japanese public life and every effort is being made to search out whoever supports Dr. Minobe's views. Even Premier Okada has not escaped the breath of this scandal, and Baron Ikki, president of the privy council, is apparently in serious danger.

• • • •

THIS "defense of the emperor" is one of the cardinal principles in Japanese public life and one that it is necessary to understand in order to understand much that takes place in Japan. With the Japanese nation regarding China in the light that it does, it was quite natural that Tokyo could not possibly afford to overlook the slight contained in the article published in the New Life in Shanghai. It was necessary to take drastic action and to take it in a very public way so that every man, woman and child in the Japanese empire would know about it.

Such action has been taken and Chung-yuan has been sentenced to 14 months' imprisonment and the Nanking censors have resigned. An official apology has been made and the promise given that no such incidents will occur in the future. Japan is apparently satisfied. This time the laurels go to the ministry of foreign affairs, for the whole episode has been handled through diplomatic channels without interference by the military.

The impression should not be gained that there is any lack of sincerity on the part of the Japanese—militarist, politician, diplomat or common man—in their attitude toward his majesty. There is a very deep and abiding respect and reverence for the emperor. He is, in fact, the very dayspring of Japanese life, and it is for this reason that his defense becomes of such great importance.

"Why do you think so?"

"Because he was in Washington last night and I talked to him."

Robinson said Hopson had sent for him and that he had visited Hopson in the latter's room at the Shoreham. He said he did not know under what name Hopson had registered.

Willing to Appear.

"Did Hopson appear willing to appear before the committee?" Robinson was asked.

"I believe he is willing to appear," the witness said. "I think he'll be around in two or three days."

Robinson said Hopson was lying on a couch, wearing lounging clothes, during the conversation and that a man named Duncan, who Robinson said he thought was a golf teacher, was present. Robinson said he talked about the fact that he was to testify and that he told Hopson it might not be wise to tell the committee he had seen him. He said Hopson told him if he was asked about his whereabouts that he should tell the truth.

Robinson was asked to describe Hopson. He described him as "a big man, about 53 years old, ruddy complexion, bald head, good-natured looking and usually laughing."

"Do you know where Hopson is at the moment?" Robinson was asked.

"No, sir, I have informed you fully," he said.

Chauffeur Trailed.

"I think we'll know him when we see him," said Chairman O'Connor. "We'll have him here in 20 minutes."

That was yesterday morning. Meanwhile, it was revealed that House committee sleuths had been trailing a man named Clark, described as Hopson's chauffeur. They traced him to the Pennsylvania Hotel, near the Capitol, but he failed to throw any light on Hopson's whereabouts. Later it was learned he had checked out of the hotel.

The search spread over the community. From the Shoreham Hotel it led to the Mayflower and the Carlton—just on a hunch. It led to the law office of Hitt & Munson in the Union Trust Building. Hopson has an office there, but he seldom occupies it. He was "out."

Hurley's Office Watched.

It was reported that Hurley's office, as well as his home, was being watched.

Hurley described the visit to his home by investigators as a "disgraceful outrage."

"Mr. Hopson has never been here and my family has never seen him," Hurley said. He made it clear that he never was attorney for Hopson, but for the Associated Gas & Electric Co.

The visit to the Hurley home was made by William H. Collins, counsel for the committee, and two assistants. Collins told Hurley that certain information has come to the committee which led members to believe Hopson might be staying at the Hurley home.

Hurley told the investigators they were at liberty to search the house. They replied that they merely had a subpena and had no authority to make a search.

Asks White House Search.

Remarking that Basil O'Connor, brother of Chairman O'Connor of the Rules Committee, was a former law partner of President Roosevelt, Hurley asked:

"Why don't they look in the White House for him?"

Declaring that Chairman O'Connor was a "utilities attorney," Hurley also asked Collins: "Why don't you search his home?"

Later Hurley commented, "I am getting mighty tired of this persecution. It makes a man wonder whether he's in a free country."

Hurley's remarks were met last night with a charge by Chairman O'Connor that "if we don't get hold of Hopson tonight, it will be because Mr. Hurley has spirited him out of the city."

Meanwhile the Communications Commission last night sent to Chairman Black of the Senate Lobby Committee a report from the Western Union Telegraph Co. on messages sent here opposing the holding company bill.

Don't Mention It.

Fish What Are Fish.

DE LUXE of the de luxe, up steps "American Big Game Fishing" (Derrydale Press, 950 copies, $25) to delight to the cockles of their hearts the fishers for marlin and tuna, and to astonish and entertain the rest of us who don't know a wahoo from a tarpon. Very seldom, indeed, does a sporting book of such high caliber and superb finish come before the public, but the foremost publisher of sporting works in the country can issue a book like this in its stride, and "American Big Game Fishing" takes its place on the shelf with the other magnificent volumes of the Derrydale "Library of Sport." Any sportsman who has seen Thomas' "Hounds and Hunting Through the Ages," or Brown's "The Horse of the Desert," or "Upland Game Bird Shooting in America," by various authors, will be well able to imagine the quality of the book in hand.

And it is, I tell you, a handful! Quarto size, five pounds in weight, excellently printed (though rather grandiosely bound), and lavishly illustrated with photographs and full-color paintings, line-drawings, maps and decorations by the famous animal illustrator, Lynn Bogue Hunt, the book is something to wonder at before one even reads a line.

• • • •

SAILFISH, marlin off Cuba (discussed by Ernest Hemingway, with not an ounce of Hemingway in his style), tarpon, bonefish, fishing at Bimini, swordfish, tuna, striped bass, channel bass, Catalina Island and Southern California fishing, Panama West Coast fishing, wahoo, and fishing boats and safety at sea—these are the fish and the topics dealt with.

Mrs. Oliver C. Grinnell, wife of the late pioneer swordfish fisherman in the North Atlantic, and herself the first woman to catch a swordfish in those waters (she has caught two out of the five reeled in by women), contributes a graceful and informative preface. In it we learn, among other things the laity may not know, that big game fishing in this country started in the late 80's when a 130-pound tarpon was caught in Indian River inlet which became the talk of the Atlantic coast; that tuna have been taken commercially weighing up to 2,000 pounds (the world's record with line and reel is 956 pounds); and so on.

The body of the book itself is a vast and diverse melange on everything from the Hawaiian for wahoo (which is "ono"—and nothing at all on the little island fish, a hundredth its size, which boasts the name of "humuhumu nukunuku apuaa") to the fact that, all other reports to the contrary, a shark can catch the speedy tarpon any time it wants to. The bulk of the technical dope, of course, is of chief interest only to the Isaak Waltons.

I'M under no illusion that a man who hates Fridays, because the cook can't think of anything else to serve but fish, is going to pay $25 for such a book as this. The devotees, indeed, are numerous enough to snap up the edition as quickly as a wahoo takes the bait. (The wahoo, I am pleased to state at last, is a 50 to 150-pound fish, so savage in its striking power that it will nearly tear a rod out of a man's hands).

But for the rest of us—the occasional fishermen who think it worthy of a week's talk to take a three-pound bass—this view into Brobdingnagian realm of nine-foot sailfish (the Atlantic record, landed by Hemingway) and 505-pound broadbill swordfish (Atlantic record) is something awe-inspiring and incomprehensible. They have 12-inch reels and 21-thread lines, and sometimes (it's been done) they play a fish three days and three nights!

The Heirs Get the News of Their Inheritance.

(The scene is the living room of the Pittle homestead. Mr. Pittle has died and the family await the reading of the will.)

The Widow: I was afraid of that!

A Son: Now we're in a nice jam!

Second Son: Let's not take it so much to heart; maybe it wasn't much of an estate anyhow.

Widow (as if afraid to ask the question): How much did he leave?

Lawyer (sadly): Now, I want you to promise me you'll bear up and not give way to your feelings.

Widow: I promise.

Lawyer: This is going to be pretty bad.

The Sons: Out with it; we can take it.

(They all groan.)

• • • •

Widow: Don't tell us it will run over a million! Please!

Lawyer: I regret to have to inform you that your husband had worked hard, shown unusual intelligence, manifested considerable thrift and managed to save almost $2,000,000, all of which he left to you and the boys.

Widow (weeping): How could he have done a thing like that to us!

The Sons: $2,000,000! Why that means we will starve to death!

(They pace the room in deep despair.)

Lawyer (trying to console them): It isn't as bad as it might be. Suppose he had left five or ten million? You'd be penniless!

• • • •

Widow: It isn't the money so much . . . It's the thought of all the figuring and conferences and Government correspondence we'll have to endure before we will finally know how little we will have to live on.

A Son (somewhat bitterly): Why was dad such an old fool? Why couldn't he have been like Mr. Widgjemms?

Another Son: What about Mr. Widgjemms?

First Son: He never saved a cent. When he died last month he didn't leave a thing to anybody. It made his family very happy.

• • • •

Widow: We shouldn't criticize father so; he probably thought it was all right to save his money and leave it to his dear ones. He was so old-fashioned!

Lawyer: Well, have you any instructions for me?

Widow: There's nothing to do but give the money to the Government and open a peanut stand or something.

Lawyer: It's rather more complicated than that; I forgot to say that a good part of the estate is in the plant and business. It is very successful and he would like to see his heirs carry it on!

Widow and Sons (in unison and after a violent sob): Who wouldn't!

"We are farther out of the slump than most people think," says Jim Farley. Well, that wouldn't necessarily mean a new record for distance traveled.

The Statement on Ford Tax

The following statement of how the Henry Ford estate might be affected in inheritance taxation was made before the Senate Finance Committee yesterday by Robert H. Jackson, counsel for the Internal Revenue Bureau:

Questions have arisen in these hearings and in the press as to the application of the proposed inheritance tax to such an estate as that of Henry Ford, and its effect upon the Ford Motor Co.

It would be unlawful to make public the figures of the Internal Revenue Bureau, for there is no way in which we can discuss this singular American fortune without identifying it. We will, therefore, use figures reported by the Ford Motor Co. to the Massachusetts Commissioner of Corporations, and other publicly available information, and without any indorsement of accuracy.

The 1934 report of the Ford Motor Co to the Massachusetts Commissioner of Corporations indicates a net worth of approximately $600,000,000.

Edsel B. Ford, it is stated by reliable sources, in 1919 acquired 41½ per cent of the outstanding stock of the Ford Motor Co. Henry Ford, therefore, does not own more than 59 per cent of the stock of the Ford Motor Co., and the inheritance tax could only apply to what he retains.

Edsel Ford has already received an interest in the Ford Motor Co. now worth on the balance sheet $246,000,000. This is not touched by inheritance or estate taxes. This illustrates concretely what I have stated to be the general rule, that estates do not pass from rich men to poor men, but usually to heirs already amply provided for.

An estate of $354,000,000, the balance sheet value of the remaining 59 per cent of the stock which we will assume Ford still owns, is abnormal by any test we know. The House bill, intended to cover most normal estates, stops graduation entirely at $10,000,000 and the Ford estate, on these figures, would be 35 times the point at which graduation of rates ceases. The largest estate so far returned to the Bureau of Internal Revenue was $140,000,000. It is obvious that the hypothetical application of this law to the Ford fortune would be a distortion of its usual application.

Moreover, while the Ford Motor Co. has been accumulating its surplus at an average rate of $20,000,000 a year, this amount has not been distributed to stockholders where it would be subject to surtaxes. The increase in value of the holdings of Henry Ford, if realized upon by a sale in his lifetime, would pay heavy individual taxes. If it now passes by inheritance it will have escaped all surtaxes. Thus, if the heirs of Henry Ford shall now find themselves in high inheritance tax brackets, it is in part offset by the advantages of accumulating wealth without paying surtaxes thereon.

It is impossible, on the basis of published figures, to arrive at a reliable estimate of the tax that might be imposed upon the estate of Henry Ford. We do not know how much of his holdings will remain in his individual possession and subject to tax or how much of them will pass to organizations that are exempt from tax, nor what part of them will pass to his son and what part to others.

The inheritance tax, whatever its amount, would not be a tax on the Ford Motor Co., nor a claim against it. According to public statements, the Ford Motor Co. began business in 1903 with $28,000 in cash actually paid in, and its net worth of $600,000,000 in 1934 represents the accumulations after the payment of dividends. Over this period, the Ford Motor Co. has added to the book value of its stock through accumulation of surplus an average of roughly $20,000,000 a year. It is obvious that a corporation with this record is not to be abandoned or closed because of any tax on the right to inherit its stock.

The utmost to be anticipated would be that some part of the equity now represented by the common stock would be sold to other interests or to the public. This equity might be disposed of in part through a bond issue, or through preferred stock, or by a sale of a portion of the common stock. The effect of this would be to convert what is now a family industry into a widely owned one, and to permit the public to share in the future earnings of an enterprise to the building of which public patronage has made a substantial contribution.

opportunity, over a period of years, of raising very substantial revenue."

Instead of distributing surplus among stockholders, where it would be subject to surtaxes, Jackson said, the Ford Motor Co. has added to the book value of its stock by accumulating a surplus on an average of $20,000,000 a year.

It is obvious that a corporation with this record is not to be abandoned or closed because of any tax on the right to inherit its stock," he declared.

The Treasury witness will complete his testimony before the Finance Committee today, with a discussion of proposed corporation taxes. Chamber of Commerce witnesses will follow him. The committee then is expected to close hearings and go into executive session for revision of the House bill. A report to the Senate is expected by next Monday.

Leaders still hope to conclude Senate action on the tax bill, and adjourn Congress the week of August 18.

Tax Structure Unbalanced.

In his testimony before the Senate Finance Committee yesterday, Jackson meticulously avoided any reference to the rates imposed in the House tax bill.

But he insisted this Administration "inherited in 1933 a tax structure which, in terms of making that burden proportional to ability to pay, had become out of balance even by the standards adopted during the preceding Administration."

In 1930, he said, taxes bearing most heavily on the well-to-do contributed $2,475,000,000 to the National Treasury, or 68.2 per cent of its total internal revenue and customs receipts, while miscellaneous taxes and customs receipts, bearing most heavily on the consumer, contributed only $1,152,000,000, or 31.8 per cent.

He declared the ratio had so changed by 1933 that only $780,000,000, or 41.7 per cent, was raised by taxes based on ability to pay, while taxes based on consumption produced $1,090,000,000, or 58.3 per cent. Since 1933, he said, the trend has been in the same direction.

Tax Burden Shifted.

"While the shift in the tax burden from those more able to those less able to pay has been small from 1933 to 1935," he said, "this shift, however small, is unsound. The trend should be reversed."

He proposed a readjustment "to meet the cost of recovery by a recovery tax program that will eliminate the present inequities and that will not impair the purchasing power of the mass of consumers."

"Added revenue to go toward balancing the budget and toward meeting the cost of overcoming a depression which threatened rights of property," he said, "should be contributed by the propertied class in proportion to their ability to pay."

Following up the President's announced wealth distribution policies, much of Jackson's testimony dealt with wealth "concentration" in a few families. He said the old saying about wealth being dissipated in three generations no longer holds.

"It is not true of large invested fortunes under present conditions," he said. "They not only perpetuate themselves, they grow. This is because they are now so large."

The 53 "thrifty" taxpayers recently referred to by the President with incomes in 1932 of more than $1,000,000, were dragged forth again by Jackson to illustrate his point. Of the 58, he said 38, or over 70 per cent, were accounted for by membership in 14 families.

He said it was "inconsistent" not to apply the principle of graduation to all incomes over $1,000,000, and argued that taxpayers in this class have "many devices" for reducing tax liability not available to the small taxpayer.

Foremost among the so-called "devices," he enumerated investment in tax-exempt securities, as "the most effective and least to be criticized." Others, he said, reduce their taxes by obtaining allowances as business losses of the expense of show farms, racing stables and hobbies. In comparison, he insisted, the "evasion devices" of those of moderate means are usually "crude, based on curbstone or inexperienced advice."

Turning again to proposed inheritance taxes, he declared there were no "serious" Administration difficulties relating to collection problems, hardship on going business, and valuation.

Witnesses appearing today are expected to furnish practical illustrations of how the proposed House inheritance rates actually would operate to disintegrate large fortunes after one generation, and their likely effect on business.

President's Oil Parley Brings Speedy Reply

House and Senate Offered Similar Measures to Replace Codes.

By the Associated Press.

House and Senate oil leaders tossed almost identical bills into the congressional mill yesterday in speedy response to a presidential indorsement of oil legislation at this session.

To avoid a last-minute legislative snarl, oil State spokesmen at both ends of the Capitol were seeking immediate, simultaneous action along these lines:

Senate consideration of a measure introduced by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, as a substitute for one already on the calendar.

House Interstate Commerce Committee approval, perhaps after a short hearing, of a bill by Chairman Cole (Democrat), Maryland, of a special oil sub-committee.

Cole's bill would re-establish a Federal petroleum administrative board as an independent agency with $12,000-a-year salaries for the five members. Thomas' would put the board under the Interior Department and give the members $10,000.

President Roosevelt, at a conference on Monday with congressional spokesmen, cleared the way for the legislation, which is intended partially to replace the petroleum code.

The Thomas-Cole plan would permit voluntary intra-industry agreements, approved by the President, which would seek to prevent waste, eliminate unfair competition and set up adequate working conditions and pay. Waiving of the criminal provisions of the anti-trust laws would be allowed.

It would enact permanently and put under the oil board's administration to Connally act to choke off access to interstate commerce of oil illegally produced beyond State quotas.

A third major provision would give congressional consent to an interstate compact for conservation of oil and gas executed February 16 in Dallas.

Congressional sources said the President probably would spur the drive for enactment in a special message to Congress.

last week in defiance of a town ordinance.

Now what Mayor Douglas M. Blandford of Rockville would like to know is—Who's going to try Judge Smith? Also—Who's going to prosecute officials—Federal, county and town—that Thompson has arrested, or may, in the future, arrest? For Blandford believes:

"If the town ordinances are lawful, they are going to be enforced as long as the residents of Rockville want them enforced. I don't believe in special privileges for anyone. The judge or the county officials or even the mayor have no right to special privilege."

Last night Mayor Blandford was considering asking the Maryland Circuit Court to appoint a special magistrate to handle all cases of parking violations, including that of Judge Smith. At the same time, Town Attorney F. Barnard Welsh was looking through a lot of law books to see if someone can't be found to prosecute Watkins.

Meanwhile the town council meets tonight in regular session. It is expected to talk mostly about parking regulations. Government officials charged with their violation, and things like fear and favor.

Administration 'Deal' Shelves Bonus Issue for This Session

fix a date of adjournment," said Robinson, "it is felt that this policy will contribute to the conclusion of the work of the present session."

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, and Senator Frederick Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, jointly introduced a liberalization of the Harrison bill for optional cash redemption of bonus certificates, under a plan that would pay 97 per cent of face value.

House bonus inflationists considered a drive to sign up the House petition for discharge of the Ways and Means Committee from consideration of the Patman bill. The petition now has 162 signatures, with 218 needed. The plan is to sign up the petition this session and vote on discharging the committee next January.

Steiwer Willing to Wait.

Senator Steiwer said the bill he jointly proposed with Senator Byrnes would go over until January for consideration, if the leadership consented to "a definite date for its consideration, say two weeks from opening of the session."

The 25 per cent additional credit allowed veterans under the existing bonus laws in return for delayed cash payment, which was eliminted from the recently proposed Harrison compromise, would be restored under the Byrnes-Steiwer bill.

Steiwer said if the bill now were in operation, a veteran could receive in the fall 96 per cent of the face value of his certificate, or $974 on a $1,000 bonus. If approved next year, this would mount to 97 per cent.

Would Push Back Date.

The adjusted service certificates now held by former service men were issued in 1926 and will mature in 1945. Payment under the Byrnes-Steiwer bill also would be based on a 20-year maturity, but the time would begin on Armistice day, 1918, and the maturity date would be November 11, 1938. A veteran would have cash surrender privileges, but if he held his present certificate, he would receive face value in 1938.

Other provisions of the bill include remission of interest from September 30, 1931, as in the Patman bill, and authority for the President to use work-relief funds for paying the bonus.

Decision of Senate leaders to use hard-boiled tabling tactics to stave off crippling amendments to the tax bill and other major legislation came as conference deadlocks on a number of bills began to crumble and the final adjournment curtain loomed through the maze.

Aug. 17 Adjournment Seen.

There were some leaders optimistic enough to believe that Congress could wind up its business by August 17, if insurgent moves are headed off. Along with the proposed bonus agreement came rumors of overtures toward fixing a January date for voting on the Frazier-Lemke bill. Only some such understanding, Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, said, will appease those who want to place more currency in circulation.

One prominent Republican leader pointed out that steering committee moves to table "irrevelant" amendments will not necessarily serve as a "gag" on debate. A tabling motion is not debatable. It was contended, however, that Senators might talk as long as they pleased on an issue if they merely served notice of intention to file an amendment.

Robinson Explains Position.

In explaining the steering committee's position on the bonus, Robinson said:

"Many advocates of the bonus feel that it is impracticable to secure action during the present session and realize that attempts to attach the bonus legislation as riders to bills on other subjects would render it impossible to secure full consideration and to develop the strength of any fair bonus measure that might be advanced as a rider.

"The committee felt that this subject should not be complicated with other legislation, but should be dealt with separately and on its merits."

Exhibitor Asks Injunctions on 3 Movie Firms

St. Louis Man Charges Film Companies Violated Trust Laws.

By the United Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 6.—A petition for a temporary injunction seeking to restrain three major motion picture distributors from alleged violation of the Sherman anti-Trust act was filed tonight in St. Louis Federal Court.

The companies named are Warner Brothers-First National, R-K-O Radio, and Paramount Pictures, and their affiliates and officers.

The petition asked that the producers show cause August 19, why an injunction should not be issued, and charged that the companies had been acting in restraint of trade.

Government attorneys announced the object of the injunction was to prevent film companies from entering into new contracts with St. Louis exhibitors until the courts have ruled on the Government's suit.

The anti-trust case, filed last January on findings of a Federal grand jury, has been set for hearing September 30.

Individuals named in the original suit included Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers; Herman Starr, president of First National; Ned E. Dipinent, president of the R-K-O Distributing Corporation and George J. Schaeffer, president of three Paramount firms.

The indictments were returned on the complaint of Allen L. Snyder, St. Louis exhibitor, who said that he was unable to obtain desired features. The indictments charged that three theaters operated by Snyder were unable to obtain suitable films after August, 1934. Two of Snyder's houses have been closed.

Conviction under the Sherman law would mean a $5,000 fine and maximum penalty of one year in the penitentiary.

The suit further charged that the defendants conspired to corner large amounts of outstanding bonds of Snyder's three theaters, and to use them as a threat to prevent anyone but Warner Brothers or its affiliates from exhibiting.

The building owners were threatened with "great loss, injury and damage" if anyone other than Warner Brothers operated the theaters and lessees were warned that their "business, trade, reputation and property" would be harmed if they should attempt to operate, the indictment charged.

Block bookings, whereby exhibitors contract for a set group of pictures, sometimes before completion, was not mentioned. Federal attorneys said they felt the present action would serve as a sufficient warning.

Work Rushed on Bridge Replacing Covered Span

Lexington, Va., Aug. 6 (AP).—The old covered bridge across North River here soon will be a relic. Work is progressing rapidly on the modern span that will take traffic from the worn boards of the old span. Practically a new road, however, must be built to the bridge from Timber Ridge, seven miles from Lexington on the Staunton highway.

The original Covered Bridge was first built before the Civil War. It was burned during the conflict, and rebuilt shortly after. Some of the original boards were salvaged and used in the present structure.

School Official Smashes Door To Eject Rival

Chicagoan Locks Himself In When His Successor Takes Office.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—A physical siege in the county building was ended tonight when eight men, swinging sledge hammers, battered down a door and ejected Otto F. Aken from the county superintendent of schools office, where he had barricaded himself against his rival, Noble J. Puffer.

There remained, however, the legal loggerhead, in which Aken had instituted quo warranto proceedings to force Puffer to prove by what right he is entitled to the superintendent's position. Puffer was elected last November, defeating Aken, but the latter refused to "retire."

The battering ram squad appeared in the outer room of the superintendent's office, where Puffer was ensconsed. In the inner sanctum Aken had retained possession of the office throughout the night.

Six men's who had climbed into Aken's stronghold through a window, where with Aken when the eight strong-arm invaders battered down the door, Aken had just remarked to a reporter:

"They won't catch me asleep. I'm the superintendent and I'm going to stay here."

The invaders stormed the inner office and, when some of Aken's followers refused to leave, dragged them out. Aken himself put on his hat and left—after Puffer walked in and declared no records or other appurtenances of the office could be removed.

Puffer, who had followed the sledge swingers into the room, directed them in what to do but when asked who the men were replied:

'I don't know who they are and I don't know a thing about it."

Fists were swung yesterday when Puffer arrived at the office to be "inducted" amid a bank of flowers. Neither of the principals was involved in the melee, but their retainers took matters seriously and pushed each other around.

Aken then locked himself in his private office, equipped with a bath, and sent out for three chicken pies to fortify him during the siege. Puffer retaliated by cutting off a telephone connection to the inner room and getting down to work with "business as usual."

Lincoln, Nebr., Aug. 6 (AP).—John S. Logan held undisputed possession of the office of the State Department of Insurance tonight, but Conn W. Moose, dismissed as director of the department Saturday, gave no indication he will recognize the dismissal.

Moose left the office for lunch and did not return for the rest of the day, but he left assurance he would be in town and would visit the office from time to time.

"I will be pleased to have Mr. Moose visit the office at any time," Logan said, "but I will resent any attempts on his part to assume authority or direction of the department."

Employes of the department took their orders today from Logan. Moose attempted to give only one order. He asked for the mail, but Logan countermanded that order.

Treasurer Sworn In.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland Planning Labor Day Celebration

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 6 (AP).—Plans are being completed for the annual Labor Day rally here September 2. A parade in which delegations from all sections of Maryland and from Washington will march is scheduled for the afternoon and will be followed by addresses and contests and dancing.

Speakers will include Miss Anna Neary, American Federation of Labor representative; George B. Roberts, United Rubber Workers Council; John T. Jones, United Mine Workers; State Senator Robert B. Kimble and Warren D. Mullin, National Council for the Prevention of War.

New Play to Receive Tryout in Abingdon

Abingdon, Va., Aug. 6 (AP).—A new mountain play, "The Hill Between," written by Lula Vollmer, will be given a tryout by the Barter Theater here next week, commencing Monday. The cast will include Robert Porterfield, leader of the Barter Theater movement. Robert Hudson, Iris Whitney, Geoffrey Lind, Theresa Wittler, Beatrice Cole and Nell Harrison.

"The Pursuit of Happiness" is being given this week by a cast composed of Frank Lovejoy, Wendell Witten, Carol Day, Janet Watkins and Marion Willis.

To win new customers quickly, NASH—without regard to present profits—has made the 1936 LAFAYETTE the biggest, safest car ever offered at its price!

● You can't afford to buy your car out of habit this year. Or on somebody's say-so. Something has happened in the lowest-price field that will change all of your previous ideas about what you can get in a low-priced car!

To get a big share of the lowest-price field, Nash has made the 1936 LaFayette a great big 6 passenger car with ALL of the vital engineering features of high-priced cars, yet as easy on gas and oil as smaller cars!

This may all sound too good to be true. But it IS true . . . so true that you can SEE it with your own eyes! Any Nash-LaFayette dealer will show you—through the amazing, new X-Ray System.

X-Ray Reveals Everything

It's no longer necessary to take for granted the parts of a car you can't see. Through the X-Ray System, the surprising, hidden differences inside cars of the same price are brought to light clearly, simply, so that anyone can understand them.

You will see without fear or favor the vital engineering features that high-priced cars always include . . . the things that low-priced cars leave out. And you will see that the 1936 LaFayette alone in the lowest-price field gives you 6 or 8 vital features that expensive cars never omit!

Before you buy any car this year, get the real facts about all cars. And see the 1936 LaFayette before you make your choice! The Nash Motors Company, Kenosha, Wisconsin.

Amazing X-RAY System lets you see, with your own eyes, the astonishing difference in cars of the same price!

Simply and graphically the X-Ray System reveals the whole truth. You get just plain facts . . . facts that you as a car buyer are entitled to know! See the X-Ray System. It's fascinating!

IF YOU HAVE ATHLETE'S FOOT ...READ THESE FACTS!

NOT A GERM . . . BUT A DANGEROUS FUNGUS

WHY risk suffering and expense by trying to cure Athlete's Foot with make-shift remedies? Why wait until it spreads to other parts of your body or infects members of your family or friends?

Your doctor will tell you that ordinary germicides and antiseptics are worthless for treating Athlete's Foot. It is a fungus. Nothing has stopped it—effectively and always—until a chemist created 3XB. Now leading institutions, colleges, hospitals, doctors and chiropodists use 3XB as the one standard treatment. It stops the itching instantly. And in 7 to 15 days the fungus is destroyed!

Thousands write that 3XB cleared up their Athlete's Foot—often with just one application—after x-ray treatments, skin specialists and all common remedies had failed. 3XB costs $1.00 a bottle—a low price because it works when everything else fails. 3XB Corp., 122 E. 42 St., N. Y. C.

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE! Get 3XB at any People's Drug Store. If not absolutely satisfied, return used bottle and your money will be refunded in full.

Lotus Presents Plenty of Girls In Floor Show

By Chanticleer.

Strange as it may seem, a press agent has been modest in exploiting his wares. The miracle of the ages, forsooth.

The Lotus Restaurant's midsummer revue is what we provincials so quaintly term a "pippin." It's a midwinter show right here on Fourteenth street, the first fortnight of August.

Gals, gals, everywhere. And DeMayo and Leland to temper, with graceful ballroom steps, the whirl of taps and shim-shams by the ladies of the ensemble.

"Gimme a line and we go to town," says Master of Affairs Al Norton, rubbing his hands and sidling out on the patch of hardwood. And Al and the girls go to town.

• • • •

Soft shoe...tap...shim-sham... plenty of variety in fast footwork ...with Ruth Mason setting the pace from the first number... followed by Grace and Ann Seidler... and then Grace out on that "great big floor all by herself" in an acrobatic tap that brings the customers' hands together with most pleasing effect on the management's ears.

Aside from that, you'll have to go and see for yourselves. Keep grandpa away from the ringside tables . . . unless he's still good for a little chin chucking . . . because the girls just will effervesce in one number . . . and muss the gentlemen's hair and talk baby-talk.

• • • •

As will be noted elsewhere on this page of where to go to have food and fun, the Mayfair Cafe of All Nations has done a job of costuming its girls, beginning with the hostesses and ranging right down to the last waitress on the dog watch.

Every girl in her dress now represents a country . . . and authentic they are, too . . . having been copied from information supplied by the National Geographic Society. The hostesses are the U. S. A. (in case you are in doubt, the letters appear on their hats) and the waitresses are so correct in their attire that the Dutch girl wears wooden shoes. It's all in keeping with the mural decorations.

• • • •

Summer is slipping away and we haven't had a good fish story. Until today. It seems that James Speros, Thomas Circle restaurateur, this year came very near winning an annual bet he has had for the last ten years with his partner, Andrew Panos. The contest—to see who could catch the biggest fish on their regular Thursday night fishing trips. Every year Mr. Speros has been nosed out by a catfish's whisker. Last week he had an idea. He sent his assistant, Aristides Dracos, to take his place. Dracos was a good man to send. He returned with the biggest flounder of the season! But do you know what kind of an old meany Mr. Panos is? He won't let Speros count the fish Dracos caught. (Note: The contest is still on.)

• • • •

This is a story they tell around the Mayflower lounge: It seems a lady came into the lounge one afternoon and ordered a julep. And then carefully and tenderly handed a small package to the waiter. "This mint," she explained, "has been grown in my own backyard and is superior. I want it used." After she had had her julep and remarked how much better it was for having been made with her own mint, she went out. She still doesn't know that Mayflower mint was used. You see, the lady had brought catnip!

• • •

Howard Montgomery, of the trained pedal extremities and the sophisticated songs, turns out to be an able master of ceremonies, too. A triple-threat man, so to speak. Howard is held over at Maryland Club Gardens to introduce the show from "across the bay" . . . in the absence of Charlie Mayer . . . who is vacationing for the first time in many months. The Gardens' new prima donna is Belle Regis, who is delightful to look upon and exceedingly easy to listen to.

• • •

The amazing likeness of Leland, of the dance team at the Lotus, to Leon Brusiloff, Madrillon maestro, apparently is not enough for one week. Dropping in at the Hangar Club to shake hands with Cecil Ellington, whose band is sending sweet music into the night air beginning this week over on t'other side of the Potomac, I discovered that these Ellingtons seem to gravitate to Washington from the old homestead down in the Carolinas. Now we have Judy at the Lotus . . . when she isn't off on vacation . . . and Cecil at the Hangar Club. And that isn't all. Cecil says Mama Ellington and at least three more sisters (of seven) are now Washington residents.

It's a Broadway floor show at the Dude Ranch, with Verne Wilcox, modestly billed as the "world's greatest acrobatic dancer" . . . Peggy Paige, torch singer and dancer . . . Dolly Dare in indigo ditties . . . and Dick Bae, baritone. While Host Milton Barrett is looking over new talent at Atlantic City, Mrs. Milt is all smiles. She has what she believes to be the best floor show booked in these precincts all summer.

• • •

Try the Pink Elephant cocktail lounge at the Harrington for the ultimate in Planter's Punch . . . the Powhatan Roof for a peek at the visiting band celebrities, and this week it's Leon Belasco who is reported among the guests . . . Griffith Farms for Hawaiian music . . . Sebastian's Creole julep at the Club Habana roof for a frosted treat . . . Shoreham Terrace (Frazer Brothers) for an equilibristic novelty as a part of the supper show . . . Hi-Hat at the Ambassador for odds and ends of personal service, such as the young man who discovered to his horror that a bit of a gap had appeared in the seam of one trouser leg and promptly found a friend in little Laura Fones, cigarette vendor, who wangled two safety pins from the house service.

Waitresses of 20 Nations

Poultry Dealers Placed Under Federal License

By the Associated Press.

A bill to put dealers and handlers of live poultry under Federal licenses was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the White House.

Representative Mitchell (Democrat), of Tennessee, said it was designed to prevent "racketeering" in central markets by charging for services never given. He said the bill, previously passed by the Senate, would cut the cost of a bird to the New York consumer from 15 to 20 cents and boost the price per pound for the Southern or Western producer by 2½ to 3 cents.

The measure merely would bring live poultry into the packers and stockyards act, which provides for licensing of live stock dealers and handlers.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

GOVERNMENT workers do not benefit from boom years as workers in private industry, letters from Federal employes remind "Poor and Broke, but a Loyal American," a harsh critic of Uncle Sam's servants.

BAKER.

Today's best letter drives that point home in replying to "PBLA." It is as follows:

"Dear Mr. Baker:

"The letter of . . . is a contradiction of the familiar is also an illustration of the outs maxim that ignorance is bliss and envying the ins.

"The writer of that letter, unfamiliar with the true status of the civil service worker, painfully pictures him as enjoying a state of bliss. Apparently, the "Poor and Broke, but a Loyal American" citizen has not given much thought to the following facts:

"1. That in times of rising prices the purchasing power of the Government worker lags behind that of most other working people.

"2. That in normal times the salaries and promotions of those employed in private industry easily outstrip the salaries and promotions of the Government worker.

"3. That a Government worker may not, when not ill, absent himself from official duty for the shortest conceivable time, without having at least 15 minutes deducted from annual leave.

"4. That most (perhaps all) Government departments and agencies do not permit those employed therein to work at outside jobs, notwithstanding low and inadequate salaries.

"As to the outs envying the ins, why that is an old story. It was only as recently as 1929 B. C. (before the crash) that many people (perhaps "Poor and Broke . . ." included) viewed the civil service employes as pitiable souls who were greatly underpaid and deprived of the golden opportunity of sharing the road to riches with employes of private industry. The wages in private industry were mounting, relatively speaking, at the speed of 60 miles an hour, whereas salaries in the Government service were creeping along at the speed typical of the horse and buggy.

"Now that the depression has deflated wages in the industrial world and created therein a vast horde of unemployed, the civil service worker has become the envy of all. Because prosperity does not adequately balance the economic scales in favor of the civil service employes, the latter must at all times strive for improvement of their status.

"Therefore, in behalf of the civil service employes, I plead with "Poor and Broke . . ." and with others who may share her views to take a long range view of the status of the civil service worker; to bear in mind that since he can not rise to the crest during prosperity, he should not be expected to descend to the depths of the trough during depression.

"The status of the civil service worker and that of the worker in private industry are not fairly comparable. "M. L. W." (F).

We thank thee, Uncle Sam, today
For all our many blessings—

Filled with the best of dressings;

For rooms cool in hot weather,
But it seems on leaves of 30 days

Miss Ann Petty Wed to Rector In Alexandria

The Rev. Andrew Van Dyke and Bride Will Live in Pennsylvania.

An interesting wedding took place in Alexandria, Va., yesterday at noon when Miss Ann Elizabeth Petty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Petty, became the bride of the Rev. Andrew McCoy Van Dyke, son of the Very Rev. W. E. Van Dyke and Mrs. Van Dyke. Immanuel Chapel, scene of the ceremony, was attractively decorated with white lilies, palms and ferns. The bridegroom's father officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a princess gown of white satin, with a cowl neck, a flaring skirt, and a circular train. Her veil was of rare old family lace, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white gladioli.

Miss Gunthel Maid of Honor.

Miss Eleanor Gunthel, of Sea Cliff, Long Island, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of yellow satin, made with a shoulder cape, and a slight train. Her hat was of the same shade of satin, with a maline brim, and her arm bouquet was of lavender gladioli.

The four bridesmaids were attired in ice green satin frocks with hats to match, and they carried bouquets of yellow gladioli. They were Mrs. E. C. Stevens, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Minnie May Shreve, of Falls Church, Va., cousin of the bride; Miss Frances Lamar, of Germantown, Pa., and Miss Dorothy Shear, of Radnor Heights, Va.

Mr. William R. Van Dyke, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers included the Rev. Boyd M. Howarth, of Belvedere, N. Y.; the Rev. G. J. Locke, of Hopewell, Va.; the Rev. M. George Henry, of Durham, N. C., and the Rev. B. M. Garlick, of Baltimore, Md.

Reception at Tea House.

A reception at the Collingwood Tea House on the Potomac followed the ceremony. Mrs. Petty and Mrs. Van Dyke were in the receiving line with the young couple. Mrs. Petty's gown was of apricot lace and she wore a large horsehair picture hat of the same shade. Mrs. Van Dyke was attired in flowered chiffon, and her hat and accessories were of white.

The Rev. Mr. Van Dyke and his bride left on a wedding trip after the reception. For traveling, Mrs. Van Dyke wore a jacket frock of brown crepe with accessories to match. When they return, the couple will reside in Osceola Mills, Pa., where the Rev. Mr. Van Dyke is rector of St. Laurence Episcopal Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Petty gave a supper dance for the bridal party last night on the Shoreham Terrace.

Hair Kept Soft By Permanent Of a New Kind

By Dudley Harmon
Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

IS THE PERMANENT wave you got last spring beginning to crack up on you? Do you no longer emerge from swimming a curly headed mermaid, but looking like something out of a book on witchcraft instead?

In any event, whether you need a new permanent or whether you've never had one before, you should hie your self down to an F street beauty shop and place your head in the hands of Maxine. Maxine has been giving waves ever since they were first invented, and knows all there is to know on the subject.

And this time she has a brand-new trick up her sleeve, in the form of a new non-ammonia permanent. Ammonia has always had a peculiar drying effect on the hair, which is the reason why so many permanented heads look fuzzy and wiry. This non-ammonia arrangement, however, has all the beneficial qualities of ammonia, yet at the same time keeps the hair shining and glossy.

In fact, the chances are that it will be even softer, according to some of Maxine's faithful clients with whom we talked. They say their hair takes on greater qualities of sheen and luster after their wave.

The waves themselves are of the broad, loose type, so much more flattering to the face than the narrow, washboardy kind. With their soft gleaming undulations they look completely natural.

There's only one thing wrong with this arrangement, according to Maxine. She complains she never sees her customers from one permanent to another. They don't come around to have their hair set, for the simple reason that they find they can do it so easily themselves. This permanent has a natural pick-up. That is to say, it's so easy to set that you can do it yourself in a jiffy, whereas hair that has been dried out by a permanent needs frequent resetting.

Special Pack for Facials.

MAXINE is just as good at giving facials as she is at permanenting. She uses a special kind of pack which differs radically from any other skin lotion, cream, or pack. Its formula reflects the clinical experience of modern dermatological practice, and for the first time expert medical knowledge is applied to a beauty problem.

A facial at regular intervals should be a part of every woman's beauty commandments. Especially is this important in the summertime, when wind and weather vie with each other to see which can play the most havoc with your complexion.

Lotions, creams and ointments of various kinds can counteract much of the drying influence of exposure, but will have no effect upon the nutrition of the skin by circulation. A healthy circulation is one of the prime aids to beauty. This is where the facial comes in, for a good facial not only cleanses clogged pores but sets the sluggish blood to coursing though the veins. Anything which increases the circulation will improve the nutrition, function, and appearance of the skin.

Hot Weather Beauty Aids.

ONE OF the reasons shopping columnists enjoy summer is because the stores relieve the general apathy occasionally by getting out "specials." Just when we begin to wonder whether anything new under the sun is ever going to appear, some enterprising house comes to our rescue with an unusual summer value.

The other day we spotted just such an unexpected bargain at a local department store. It's a combination of bath powder, plus a puff, plus eau-de-cologne, three of the most necessary hot weather aids to beauty.

Eau-de-cologne is replacing toilet water and the heavier perfumes this summer because of its delightfully cooling and refreshing qualities.

Powder, puff and eau-de-calagne come in a charming little box, gayly decorated with motifs of dancing figures. Ideal for bridge prize, a going away present, or to tuck away in your bag on week-end trips. It's a $1.50 value for $1.10.

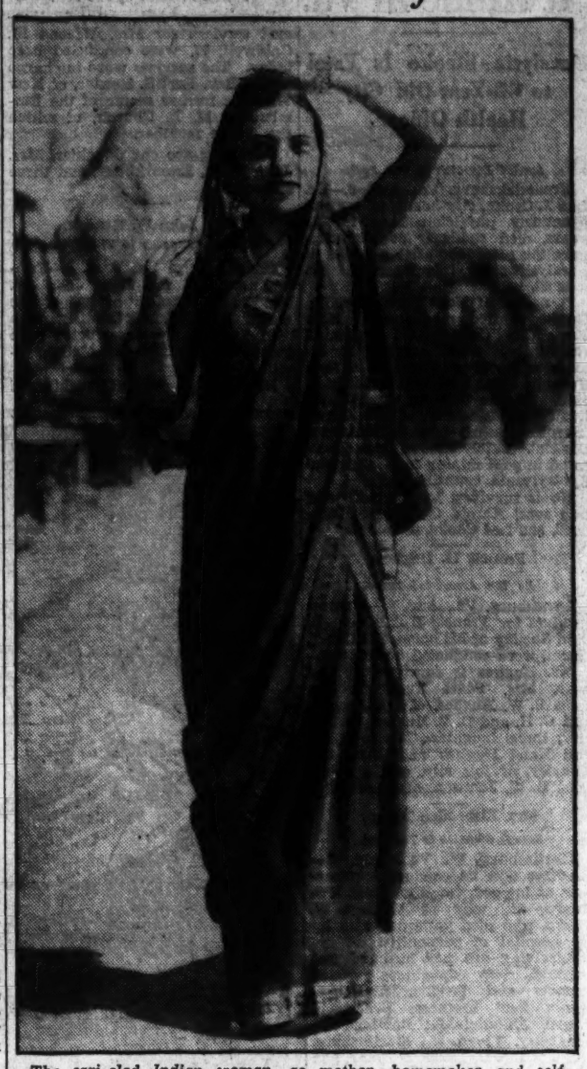
World Declared Misled About Women of India



The sari-clad Indian woman, as mother, homemaker and self-effacing wife, is the heart of modern Indian civilization, according to Dr. Eleanor M. Hough, author of "The Co-operative Movement in India." A typical woman of Bombay, India, posed for the photograph.

Their Position Enviable in Some Respects, Says Dr. Eleanor Hough, Author of Book on the Co-operative Movement.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

PRIDING THEMSELVES on their hard-won "rights," their emancipation, their political privileges, women of the West generally conceive of Eastern women as mere chattels, cooks and child-bearers for their turbaned and tyrannical husbands.

Yet the typical Indian sahib is not a tyrant, and his wife is in no sense his subordinate. The average Western woman with all her privileges, in fact, has no more influence in her home and is accorded no more respect than the quiet, sari-clad Indian woman who as mother, homemaker and self-effacing wife, is recognized as the heart of modern Indian civilization.

These are observations of Dr. Eleanor M. Hough, author of "The Co-operative Movement in India," who has spent more than two years in Bombay and who will leave Washington this week for another extended visit in India.

Yesterday, as she discussed the position of Eastern women in the changing civilization of the East, Dr. Hough pointed out that there is apparently an almost universal misunderstanding about Indian women.

"Why they have been so often, and so oddly, misrepresented is hard to explain," she said, "for the truth is the Indian woman's position is in some respects an enviable one, and certainly many of her precepts and practices are worthy of being followed by women in all parts of the world."

Religion Is Major Factor.

In this connection she mentioned that cheerfulness and hospitality, even in the face of dire poverty, characterizes the atmosphere in the average Indian home. Religion is so much a part of life there, she explained, that even routine duties have sacred significance.

"The Hindu view of life that sacrifice is the foundation of this world is evident in most households, since the Hindus still comprise 66 per cent of the population," she said. "As a result, the majority of the natives in India are striving to lead holy lives, each person being convinced he will otherwise suffer in his next existence."

Dr. Hough further explained that the typical homemaker in India has "remarkable capacities for preserving a kindly temper in almost any situation. She is completely selfless; she entirely submerges her own personality in serving those around her, and she apparently forgets that as an individual she has some rights and privileges."

This spirit of sacrificial service and self-denial was carried over into public endeavor when women became interested in the Nationalist movement, Dr. Hough said.

"This accounts for the fact that when swift-footed women slipped out of their homes and appeared in the market places directing political meetings and boycotting British goods, the world at large, for the first time in recent years, recognized that women represented one of the strongest forces in modern India," she added.

Prejudice Still Widespread.

Since then, women have been much in evidence in public life there, according to Dr. Hough. "In Bombay, where I spent most of my time, women today are voting, running for office and entering the business and professional worlds. Yet there is still widespread prejudice against women of the upper classes earning money. Because of this, for centuries numbers of women have turned their attention to philosophy and religious literature—two lines of endeavor as much revered in the East as banking and brokerage in the West. As a result some of the outstanding poets and writers in India today are women."

Among the ones she mentioned specifically was Sarojini Naidu, a widely known poet and one of the outstanding patriots in modern India. In this connection, Dr. Hough also recalled that one of the greatest of all Indian religious poets of the past was a woman, Mirabai.

"In ancient India, women were remarkably free and were outstanding contributors to public welfare in many fields," she said. "With the coming of the Moslems, however, woman's position in northern India changed. She was forced into purdah (seclusion) and hampered on all sides by caste restrictions and taboos. But today her star is again ascending. She is coming into her own throughout India."

Home Remains Chief Domain.

Yet her chief domain is still the home, Dr. Hough continued. "There her spiritual qualities, her insight into Eastern philosophy and her knowledge of Hindu principles shine at their best. There, not hampered by caste restrictions, she sets an example of patience, sacrifice and self-denial for her husband, sons and daughters, and elevates society probably more by working at its bedrock than by playing a prominent part in public life."

Dr. Hough first went to India to study the co-operative movement. This took her to Bombay where she observed its workings at first hand. Her book on what she discovered was written as part of the work for the degree of doctor of philosophy for George Washington University.

Jealous Mother Resents Daughter's Dates With Eligible Suitor.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have been a constant reader of your column since it first appeared in The Post, always hoping I might find there the answer to a certain problem which stands between me and normal, happy living. It is this: I have a "problem mother."

I am 27, and have been making my own way and contributing something to the upkeep of our home since I was 19, but my mother still treats me like a child, supervising my diet, my dress, my friendships, my comings and my goings. Up until a year ago, I don't suppose I'd had more than half a dozen dates in my life, and never two with the same man. It was partly my fault, I suppose, because I never had the poise and independence that makes a girl interesting and attractive; but my mother undoubtedly had something to do with it, too, if only the way she had of making me feel guilty and uncomfortable just for leaving her at home. I always had to be home by 11 o'clock, too, so she wouldn't worry.

* * * *

Perhaps I should explain that my mother is a widow, as my father died when I was three, and I am her only child. She has devoted her life to me, as she often reminds me, and because she really has no other interest in life, it makes it all the harder for me to do what I know I should do—make a personal declaration of independence.

* * * *

To make a long story short, a year ago I was introduced to a man who has subsequently become my dearest friend. We are not in love with each other, but even so, we are the best of friends. He is like a father, a brother, a friend and a beau all in one.

* * * *

For some time, we spent three or four evenings together a week. But my mother was so distressed over losing my companionship that we finally decided to see each other two nights a week, definitely stated. We thought this would encourage mother to make some other plans for those evenings. Instead, she seemed to take morbid pleasure in remaining home. One night recently, I was out until shortly after midnight with this man (which is later than I ever returned before) and got home to find mother in hysterics.

* * * *

She said she was nearly crazy with anxiety, and she also pointed out that I never stay out that late when I go out with her. I tried to scold her into self control, and in a quarrel which followed, she threatened to commit suicide, saying she was ready to die if I no longer loved her. The whole thing made me ill.

* * * *

I feel things must not continue to go on as they are. My friend says it is a situation I must work out for myself; that it is a relationship in which a third person can not interfere. What do you think I should do? My mother is comparatively young and besides her salary she has a small regular income from a family inheritance. She could make her life so interesting if she would. But how can I make her see that? DAUGHTER.

The Siamese Twin Act.

DEAR DAUGHTER: The only way to teach your mother that you are not the central pivot of the universe is to refuse to indulge her in the hallucination any longer. She probably won't commit suicide if you do put your foot down on her tantrums. People who threaten suicide seldom carry out the threat. It's usually a weakling's way of bullying those who love him (or her).

Even if she should, that would be proof that at present you are permitting yourself to be dominated by a person of unsound mind, a state of affairs in which no rational person should wish to continue for a moment.

* * * *

The next time she throws a fit of hysterics you mght warn her, coolly yet kindly, that if there is ever a recurrence of that type of scene you will move out bag and baggage into a place of your own, and that once moved you will stay moved. You'll have to mean it to make it stick. Don't try bluffing, because emotional tyrants know all the tricks of that trade.

* * * *

If the time ever comes when she challenges that promise, and subsequently quails before you in remorseful terror while you pack your bags, promising to do better in future, you might then tell her that you are going away for a few days, anyway, to give both of you time to think things over, and to plan a more wholesome concordat for the future.

* * * *

There is no more unwholesome spectacle in the social scene than that of parent and child doing a spiritual Siamese-twin ("—we've never been separated in our lives—") act. It's unbeautiful, unhealthful and unnecessary.

Paris Fashions Present Enigma In Waist Lines

Winter Coats With Wide Shoulders Furnish a Surprise.

By the Associated Press.

Dilkusha showed winter frocks and suits with detachable unbelted blouses ending at the hip bones, but another designer displayed suits with high, close-fitting skirt tops creeping up over the lower ribs.

Most of the others held waists at the slenderized normal line of an inch or two below, but fashion observers were beginning to wonder just where the 1936 waistline was.

Dilkusha exhibited the longest street skirts shown this season. They reached to within five or seven inches of the ground.

Day Frocks of Soft Wools.

Day frocks in the Dilkusha collection were designed with big sleeves and skirts, having decided fullness in front and back and falling in soft folds reminiscent of Russian frocks. They were fashioned of soft wools in black, emerald and madonna blue and mahogany brown, and were trimmed with belts having Russian eagle clips of Persian turquoise buttons.

Winter coats launched by Helm furnished another fashion surprise with their very wide shoulders, sometimes extending two inches outside of the normal line. They were designed in black, brown, mulberry and forest green wools with mutton leg sleeves and Astrakhan collars.

The shortest skirts since the big drop in hemlines of 1929, wide shoulders and high necklines were displayed at the end of the first week of the fashion showings. The final verdict for 1936, however, awaits this week's display.

Wide Shoulder Models.

The shortest skirts appeared on sports and street suits—15 inches from the ground—although many other daytime dresses swung 10 and 12 inches from the floor.

The widest shoulders seen in years marked some models, while others favored the natural line. Extremely high necklines with two points mounting to the chin featured some blouses and daytime frocks.

Curves were noteworthy, many frocks fitting the figure closely. Skirts were fairly narrow in suits and wool dresses and wider in afternoon clothes.

Sleeves were generally long and slender or else of the big bishop type.

Writer's Palsy Often Develops Odd Symptoms

Rest or a Change of Occupation Required to Alleviate Condition.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THERE are certain occupations that require the constant repetition of similar muscular movements which may, through over use and fatigue, bring about a loss of control and hence an inability to perform the movement in question. Accompanying this condition may be pain, tremor, weakness, or cramps. The disease goes under numerous names, such as writer's palsy or cramp, piano player's cramp, seamstress' cramp, telegrapher's cramp, typist's cramp, etc.

The symptoms are likely to develop during or following periods of physical or mental strain and appear to be the result of the too steady use of a particular set of muscles of the hand, the wrist, or the forearm.

The onset of the condition is characterized by discomfort. This sensation, which is ordinarily disregarded, is followed by a dull ache, numbness, weakness, or actual cramps. After rest and massage of the parts work may be resumed, although loss of function will in all probability again ensue within a short time.

Numerous devices have been tried in an attempt to modify the condition. Among these are the use of a heavy, thick pen, or holding the pen between the second and third fingers instead of the regular position. Sometimes individuals who have exhibited the symptom in the right hand learn to write with the left. Telegraphers in former days, when sending was all done with the Morse key, might have a spasm come on either in the act of using the key or in writing or in both.

Sometimes neuritis and rheumatic pain are mistaken for writer's cramps, but in these the symptoms are persistent and are not brought on by a special maneuver or relieved when it ceases.

Because of the nervous element rest or a change of occupation is imperative. The hands and forearms may be used for almost any other type of work not requiring the constant repetition of similar movements. Exercises wherein the movements are varied, to strengthen the muscles of the forearms, hands and fingers are advised.

It is believed by some authorities that the condition is strictly a neurosis of a fatigue character. Others contend that the symptoms are closely associated with hysteria; that subjectively the patient dislikes his or her occupation, and that while the symptoms are real their origin lies not in physical causes, but manifest themselves as the result of auto or self-suggestion. In such instances psychotherapy and physiotherapy appear to offer the best hope for improvement, although it is possible that some day we will learn that the difficulty is due to some affection of the coordinating centers of the brain.

STEAK MENUS for A DAY

By Dorothea Duncan.

ONE STEAK is often too large for a family of two. If this is the case, make it a two-meal proposition. Cut out the choicest portion for broiling or pan frying. Use the tail of the steak the next day for a delicious casserole dish or stew or grind the meat and cook it as meat balls or patties.

Small leftover portions of raw meat may be ground, and if there is not enough for everyone use the meat in combination with other leftovers to form a delicious stew. You will be surprised how far one-half cup of ground steak will go when it is prepared by the following method:

Slice one Bermuda onion into fine shreds and let it cook to a golden brown in two or three tablespoons of hot butter. Add the ground meat and when it is slightly brown add a few strips of finely shredded green pepper. Next add a cup of leftover canned tomatoes or three peeled and chopped fresh tomatoes. Season to taste with salt and pepper and a dash of Worcestershire sauce. Let the mixture simmer for about one-half hour. If the stew is too thin add one tablespoon of flour mixed to a smooth paste with a little cold water.

BREAKFAST

Chilled grapefruit juice (canned)
Cooked cereal with raisins and top milk
Bacon omelet
Whole wheat toast Grape jelly
Coffee Milk (for children)

LUNCHEON

Mural Traces Beauty Through History

Mrs. Thomas Executed Work for Jubilee of King George.

A STUDY of feminine loveliness through the ages has convinced Mrs. Clara Fargo Thomas, mural painter, of two things—that women are more beautiful today than they have ever been, and that the most beautiful woman in history was Queen Nefertiti of Egypt.

Mrs. Thomas, wife of Joseph B. Thomas, widely known as a master of fox-hounds in North Carolina, has completed, in London, according to the Associated Press, a mural decoration tracing feminine beauty through history. The mural, which is 11 feet high and 65 feet long, is being exibited in a west-end gallery in aid of King George's Jubilee trust.

To obtain historical detail for the 14 panels of the mural, Mrs. Thomas searched the galleries of New York, Rome, Naples, Pompeii and Paris. The figures on the panels range from the beautiful women of ancient Egypt to those of today.

"There are no reigning beauties nowadays because nearly all women are beautiful," Mrs. Thomas says. "But I rate intelligence as the first essential to beauty.

"I found that the women of centuries ago were rarely intelligent. That is why few of them remain outstanding characters through history—Joan of Arc, Nell Gwynn, Mme. Recamier, Cleopatra.

"Women are healthier and happier today than they have been since the Greeks. That is because they are free bodily, mentally and spiritually. Why, even our clothes are nearly as simple and unconfining as the classic Greek tunic. A snap, a zip—and we're dressed."

QUEEN NEFERTITI.

Places Queen Nefertiti of Egypt First on Her List.

In putting Queen Nefertiti at the head of her list of beautiful women, Mrs. Thomas voices a judgment expressed more than a year ago by Lorado Taft, sculptor, and Dr. George S. Duncan, authority on Egyptology at American University. Dr. Duncan predicts that beauties of the future will return to Nefertiti's type.

The Egyptian queen was the wife of King Amenhotep IV and the mother-in-law of King Tut-ankh-Amen. Her beauty has been preserved through a bust made by Auto, a sculptress of that day. It shows her as possessing a clear-cut profile, with finely chiseled lips, a lean neck, bony cheeks and an expression of delicacy and kindliness.

Mrs. Thomas placed Chinese women of the second century second in her list, calling attention to their haunting beauty. Her third beauty is Mumtaz Mahal, favorite wife of Shah Jehan, who, inconsolable at her death preserved her memory by building the Taj Mahal at Agra.

31 Are Seized In Vice Squad Betting Raids

Drive On Gambling Hits 2 N. Y. Avenue Places; 16 Escape on Roofs.

In a drive to suppress gamblers, headquarters vice squad raiders yesterday descended in quick succession on two alleged bookmaking establishments on New York avenue. In all, 31 persons were arrested and subsequently released for collateral of $5 each on disorderly conduct charges.

The detectives first appeared at an establishment on the top floor of a building in the 900 block of New York avenue northwest. Their arrival was the signal for a general exodus of those inside through windows and over roof tops. When the excitement was over 16 had been arrested, but as many more had escaped.

The raiders described this place as occupying a four-room apartment, which was unfurnished except for a telephone, a desk and two electric fans. Racing charts were tacked to the wall, giving the day's entries and odds, the detectives said.

Proprietors Unknown.

In both forays the policemen were unable to identify the proprietors of the establishments. Consequently they were unable to place gaming charges against any of those persons arrested.

No sooner had the first place been raided than the detectives deployed to the 1200 block of the same street. There, one member went to a top floor apartment and knocked at a door in which there was a peephole.

A guard at the inside of the door, which was of very heavy construction, opened it. The policemen rushed in and arrested 15 men. They found this place was getting race results by telephones. These were removed. Racing charts were also found, the detectives said.

The vice squad was led by Sergt. George Deyoe. He was accompanied by Detectives Roy Blick, Oscar See and Robert Eagan. These men seized alleged gaming material in both places and booked their prisoners at the First Precinct.

List of Arrests.

Peach Growers Harvest Crop Escaping Freeze

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 7 (AP).—The Timberville section yesterday began harvesting that part of the peach crop which escaped the severe freeze of last winter and the frosts of last spring. A yield of between 30,000 and 40,000 bushels—about 12 to 15 per cent of normal—is expected.

About 20 per cent of the Timberville crop—between 6,000 and 7,000 bushels—will come from the orchard of Commonwealth's Attorney D. W. Karman, and Bowers and Garber expect to obtain between 10,000 and 12,000 bushels.

Paralysis Fear Held Baseless In Montgomery

Only 2 Cases Are Reported in County; Carrier of Typhoid Sought.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Montgomery County's health situation was explained to the Montgomery County Commissioners sitting as a county board of health yesterday at Rockville, Md., by Dr. V. L. Elicott, county health officer. The Board of Health is to meet the first week in each month to receive the health doctor's report and discuss health questions.

Dr. Ellicott reported that only two cases of infantile paralysis have been reported in the county, one at Gaithersburg and another at Silver Spring, both of which are hospitalized outside the county. He declared that appearance of two cases in a population of 55,000 should not be cause for alarm and that the health department will not restrict activities of children unless the State health officers, meeting August 9, decide such a move should be taken.

He pointed out that six cases of typhoid fever had been reported in July, which is more than the usual number for a single month, and that search for a carrier begun two years ago in the Sugarland area had been resumed. Three of the cases were in this area.

Laws regarding septic tanks are being strictly enforced, he reported, and county building inspectors and incorporated towns are cooperating by forwarding names of persons building houses out of reach of sewers. The health department writes the builders requiring that the sewage disposal facilities be constructed according to improved plans.

The Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday accepted the invitation of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce to attend a conference with chamber officials August 16 to discuss several projects of vital interest in the Kensington area.

Among these are the overpass over the railroad tracks, improvement or extension of Garrett Park road to the underpass approach, improvement of Connecticut avenue from Chevy Chase Lake to Kensington, completion of the third unit in the Beach drive of Rock Creek Park, improvement of the Forest Glen-Kensington road, elimination of dumps, enforcement of sanitary regulations and construction of a junior high school at Kensington.

The commissioners voted to attend a meeting of the State board of election supervisors August 16 at Baltimore to familiarize themselves with voting machines. The county commissioners plan to purchase about 35 machines at a cost of $900 each, for which $10,000 was provided in the annual levy for first payment.

The commissioners informed a Hyattsville dairyman that he would have to pay the fees for inspecting out of the county dairies which provide him with milk to be distributed in Montgomery County.

The salary of Mrs. Ethlyn Pratt Thompson, secretary and clerk in the health department, was raised from $90 to $110 a month and the commissioners approved leasing the Bethesda Liquor Dispensary Building for a term of one year at $100 a month, the building to be remodeled inside.

The Young Men's Democratic Club of Silver Spring, Md., was formed Monday night at a meeting in Jesup Blair Community Hall, Silver Spring. James Heiser was named temporary president and W. Edwin Warfield temporary secretary.

Membership will be restricted to registered Democrats 35 years old and under in the Thirteenth Election District, with the exception of Takoma Park, which has a Young Men's Democratic Club. The club will meet alternate Mondays, electing permanent officers in September.

Spurred by the announcement yesterday that the American Automobile Association has indorsed the proposed extension of Sixteenth street from its present terminus in Silver Spring, Md., to Georgia avenue, members of the delegation urging the project are completing plans for their appearance tomorrow morning before the Maryland State Roads Commission in Baltimore.

The Automobile Association yesterday sent a letter to the State Roads Commission urging early action on the project, pointing out that funds may be available for the extension under Maryland's $4,490,000 allotment for highways under the Federal works act.

The association in the letter asserts that the project is necessary to relieve congestion on overburdened highways leading into Washington from the north. It states that a regional survey made three years ago by the United States Bureau of Public Roads disclosed that 10,816 vehicles move daily in the Georgia avenue section lying to the north of Silver Spring.

Albert A. Ady, assistant county agent for Montgomery County, has announced that 23 members of the county 4-H Clubs will attend Club Week at the University of Maryland, beginning tomorrow and continuing until the twelfth. The major portion of the Montgomery County delegation will stay throughout the week, while several will attend special classes during the day sessions. Those attending are Arthur Lee Jones, Barnesville; William Edward Carr, Spencerville; John R. Huestis, Robert Stiles, Frank Stiles, John Stiles, George Stiles and Page Smith, of Rockville; Richard Vetter, Phillip Vetter, jr., Gordon Warfield, William Kohlenberg and Russel Umstead, of Gaithersburg; John Waters, Germantown; Ralph Young and Harold Young, of Damascus; Warren Seibel, Spencerville; Allie Messer, Washington Grove; Charles Hines and Gordon Umstead, of Olney; Douglas O'Keefe, Colesville; Ulysses Griffith 4th and Thomas Owings, of Laytonsville.

The building permit of F. S. Papot, 340 Baltimore avenue, Takoma Park, Md., was revoked yesterday by Roy P. Frye, building inspector. The dwelling which was being built on Philadelphia avenue, Takoma Park, by Papot is not within the building regulations, according to J. Wilson Dodd, town clerk. Dodd said that the walls in the house are not the proper size.

When asked what he was going to do about the matter, Papot said "it is just a trivial matter, and the permit probably will be reinstated in the morning."

28 Paralysis Cases Raise Total to 325

Albemarle County Has Largest Increase of Victims.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 6.—The largest number of infantile paralysis cases reported in a single day this summer, 28, today drove Virginia's total since July 1 to 325, of which 79 have been reported in the first six days of August.

An even dozen of the cases reported today were recorded in Albemarle County, where the attack has been concentrated for several weeks. The official total for the county was 62, but health officials there said at least 10 more existing cases had not yet been recorded by the State Health Department.

Dr. F. P. McGinnis, State epidemiologist, and Dr. J. N. Dudley, State health attache who had been aiding physicians in Southside Virginia, now are in Albemarle to help local doctors cure the disease.

Additional Reports.

In addition to the Albemarle cases, the following reports were received: Augusta, 1; Greene, 1; Halifax, 1; Louisa, 1; Nottoway, 2; Page, 1; Pittsylvania, 1; Roanoke County, 4; Wythe, 1; Newport News City, 1; Richmond City, 2. Page County had not previously reported a case.

Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, said little information was available as to the progress of individual cases. A number of reports have been received of patients being dismissed from hospitals, but Dr. Riggin said they were being released at the end of the three-week infectious period and the end of the quarantine might have little bearing on the progress toward recovery.

He did repeat, however, that the present outbreak is a mild form of the disease and that paralysis had developed in only a small percentage of cases.

Warnings Heeded.

Dr. C. H. Eller, Albemarle-Charlottesville health officer, said "legal restrictions on gatherings for children would in no way help to control the situation." He said as a result of warnings against children congregating most parents were obeying that injunction.

At Petersburg, where the first United States Public Health Service preventive vaccine clinic in Virginia has been established, Dr. A. G. Gilliam, of the Federal bureau, said 275 applications had been made for vaccine. Five other Virginia municipalities are being considered as sites for similar tests, he said. He declined to name the five.

Winchester Lifts Ban On Theater Attendance

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 6. — The ban on children under 16 years of age attending theaters has been lifted, according to information obtained from health authorities here today. The restriction had been imposed to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis.

As a result, it is believed ministers and other church officials will resume Sunday school services here for the same group. There are no cases in Frederick County or this city.

No Cases Reported To Page Board.

Luray, Va., Aug. 6.—The Page County Board of Health yesterday reported no cases of infantile paralysis had been reported in the county.

Dr. B. C. Shuler, representing Shenandoah district; Drs. Virgil Hammer, Loring Hammer, Thomas Amiss and George H. Long, representing Luray, and Dr. E. G. Brumback, representing both Luray and Springfield districts, reported they had made an exhaustive survey of their territories and that so far not a case had come under their observation.

Hampton Roads Leave Barred for Middies.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 6.—The 798 midshipmen making a summer practice cruise on the battleships Wyoming and Arkansas will not be allowed liberty in the Hampton Roads, Va., area, it was learned today, because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in Virginia.

Several days ago orders were issued at the Naval Academy prohibiting midshipmen while on their annual leave from August 30 to September 27 from visiting in Virginia and North Carolina.

South Maryland Area Reports No Cases.

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 6 (AP).—Health department officials of the three Southern Maryland counties—St. Marys, Calvert and Charles—report that there is no infantile paralysis in that section of the State.

Miss Ida Ramsey Bartol, health department nurse for St. Mary's County, said one case of what at first appeared to be infantile paralysis developed here several weeks ago. The child was taken to a Baltimore hospital, where a diagnosis showed that the disease was not paralysis. A similar case also was reported in Calvert County.

Eastern Shore Potato Prices Are Slashed

By the Associated Press.

Crisfield, Md., Aug. 6.—Potato prices on the Maryland Eastern Shore, following the collapse of the recent growers' strike, have skidded to as low as 65 to 95 cents a barrel.

Pickets which were maintained for several weeks to keep the prices at $2.10 a barrel and later at $1.60 a barrel have been withdrawn and growers now are shipping without restriction. The opening of the marketing season in New Jersey also was a factor in sending the prices down.

Statute's Author May Aid Test Case

Bailey Invited to Defend People's Court Law.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 6.—The Wicomico County Circuit Court has invited former State's Attorney L. Claude Bailey and F. W. C. Webb to submit briefs and argument in defense of the constitutionality of the act setting up the people's court here.

Bailey was author of the act, which was passed by the 1927 General Assembly.

The constitutionality of the act and the legality of the appointment of Marion A. Humphreys as its judge were attacked in a suit filed by Albert M. Walls. The legality of the appointment was contested on grounds that Humphreys is not a resident of the three districts served by the court. Attorneys for the defense have until next Monday to file answers to the suit.

Grand Jury Plans Inquiry Into Sprouse's Getaway.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 6.—Henrico County authorities today prepared to open a grand jury investigation into the escape of Harry L. Sprouse, convicted killer, from the county jail early this morning, while police conducted an intensive search for the fugitive.

The escape was discovered at 9 a. m. when H. C. Heckler, substitute day jailer, served breakfast to the prisoners. He found that Sprouse, Richmond man serving a 20-year term for the slaying of Otho Hicks in a roadhouse brawl, had sawed through his cell door and a double-barred corridor door, climbed an 8-foot barbed wire fence, and dropped 20 feet into an open courtyard.

At the request of Sheriff T. Wilson Seay, Judge Julian Gunn of Henrico Circuit Court ordered the grand jury probe, with three jailers and several prisoners scheduled to appear before the inquisitors tomorrow at 10 a. m.

J. B. Lyne, night jailer, said today he had talked to Sprouse shortly after midnight.

The fugitive, a former night club bouncer, was convicted in Goochland County Circuit Court April 30 for the death of Hicks at Pine Inn last February. He was brought to the Henrico Jail from the State prison farm, where officials termed him a "trouble-maker," to await trial on a charge of killing E. L. Hicks, brother of Otho, in the same fight.

Maryland Codes On Storage Due

Joyce Drafting Rules for Gas, Explosives.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 6.—Hazelton A. Joyce, jr., deputy commissioner of insurance, is drafting regulations for the storage of gasoline, explosives and other hazardous substances, he said today.

An act of the last Legislature empowered him to draw up and enforce such regulations. His rules, however, will not apply in any municipality which already has ordinances covering such fire hazards.

No estimate could be obtained as to when the draft would be ready, but Joyce said he would cover different hazards in different sets of rules. The storage and transportation of movie film will be the subject of one code, while gasoline regulations would be embodied in another. The hazards listed by the Legislature as subject to regulation included fireworks.

Good Apple Year Seen for Virginia

80 Cars Are Inspected by State Market Agency.

Richmond, Va., Aug 6. — Eighty cars of apples were inspected this season up to July 31, it was reported today by J. M. Meek, director of the division of markets of the State Department of Agriculture.

"This is considerably more than any other previous corresponding period and almost as many as for the past six corresponding periods," Meeks said.

Export prices are "fairly satisfactory," while domestic prices have been "somewhat below a year ago," Meek stated. He asserted this was an "unusual volume" for so early in the season. The export demand, he said, is heavy this year.

Most of the apples inspected were in the Winchester and Roanoke areas, and in King William County.

"This ought to be a good apple year," the market director said.

Tri-State Elks Adopt Changes In Constitution

Trustees to Have Longer Tenure of Office Under New Code.

By the Associated Press.

Havre de Grace, Md., Aug. 6.—A new constitution, providing for larger proportional representation of the affiliated lodges and for longer terms for the trustees, was unanimously adopted today at the fifteenth annual convention of the Tri-State Association of Elks.

Objections were made to the section providing for the election of delegates to the annual conventions on the grounds that Baltimore and Washington would have the preference in the association affairs.

These objections were withdrawn when it was pointed out that the lodges of these two cities would have a combined representation of 25 delegates as compared with 90 from all the other lodges of the area, comprising Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

The section provides that each lodge will be represented by its exalted ruler and secretary, six additional delegates and one more delegate for each 250 members. The Washington lodge will have 14 delegates and Baltimore 11. Previously each lodge had six delegates.

Instead of the annual election of the trustees, another section provides for the election of two trustees for terms of three years. Other provisions were similar to the former constitution.

Because of the absence of the representatives of several lodges, the nomination of officers and the selection of the 1936 convention city were postponed until tomorrow morning. The election will be held later in the day.

Annapolis is the leading contender for the annual meeting next year. Guy H. Miller, of Annapolis, also is the most prominently mentioned candidate for association president, to succeed State Senator Harold E. Cobourn, of Perryville.

A brilliant pyrotechnic display was offered tonight on the Susquehanna River for the delegates, visitors and residents of nearby sections of Harford and Cecil counties. The fireworks were set off from a float anchored in the river opposite Penns Beach.

Also on tomorrow's program is a memorial service at 11 a. m. for deceased members of affiliated lodges.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 6.—The Right Rev. Mgr. Peter L. Ireton, pastor of St. Anne's Catholic Church here, today expressed surprise on being informed of his appointment as auxiliary bishop of Richmond, Va.

Mgr. Ireton, who is spending a short vacation at Mount Pocono, Pa., talked by telephone with friends here following the announcement by the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognanni, apostolic delegate to the United States.

No plans have been made for the consecration of the new bishop but it is expected the ceremony will take place in the cathedral here. He will assist the Most Rev. Andrew J. Brennan, bishop of the Richmond diocese, now ill at a Scranton, Pa., hospital.

Mgr. Ireton was born in the parish of which he is now the pastor. He later attended St. Charles College in Catonsville and St. Marys Seminary. Following his ordination by Cardinal Gibbons in 1906, he studied for a year at the Apostolic Mission House in Washington.

He served as assistant pastor of St. Gregory's Church here from 1907 to 1926, when he was made pastor of St. Anne's. He was instrumental in the founding of the Junior Holy Name Society and the big brother movement in Baltimore. After the death of the Right Rev. Owen B. Corrigan, he became archdiocesan head of the Holy Name Society.

Mgr. Ireton celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood in June, 1931. He has been a member of the board of trustees of the St. Mary's Industrial School since 1910 and its treasurer since 1921. He also is a treasurer of St. James Home for Boys.

Richmond, Aug. 6 (AP).—In July 147 illicit distilleries were captured in Virginia, compared with 88 in June, it was reported today by John Wickham, in charge of the alcoholic tax unit. There were 118 arrests last month, while in June there were 55.

"Manufacturing of whisky seems to be on the increase," Wickham said, "but the Government is increasing its activities too."

Western Union Strikers Fight Substitutes in West Virginia

Messengers Attack Boys Employed to Replace Them.

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 6.—Fighting broke out today among striking messengers of the Western Union Telegraph Co. and boys who replaced them.

Harry Harper, 18, reported to police being "taken for a ride" and put out of an automobile at South Charleston after suffering a broken wrist.

E. F. Phillips, manager, said numerous fights occurred between boys employed today after 11 messengers struck for longer hours and increased wages.

Harper asserted he was about to deliver a message at a downtown address when he was seized from behind by three boys.

Phillips appealed for police to "maintain order."

Will Leave Immediately After on State Yacht to Plan Budget.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 6.—After selling $100,000 in State 3 per cent bonds tomorrow, the board of public works will embark on the State yacht DuPont for a cruise, during which the departmental budgets for the next fiscal year will be discussed.

The board, consisting of Gov. Harry W. Nice; State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., and State Treasurer Hooper S. Miles, with Chief Deputy Comptroller Joseph O. C. McCusker as secretary, will meet in the treasurer's office here.

Proceeds Go to Baltimore.

The proceeds of the bond issue will be used for the rebuilding of the Fifth Regiment armory in Baltimore. The $5,500,000 in State 3 per cent bonds sold in April brought 107.669, the highest return on record.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, is expected to file a request for the $1,250,000 remaining in the State relief pools of 1934 and 1935 with the comptroller and treasurer. Gov. Nice has agreed to abide by their decision.

A pool of $3,000,000 was set aside in each of the two years; $1,500,000 to be distributed among the counties annually and the balance each year to be applied to the debt service on the $1,000,000 State bond issue sold for Baltimore relief needs.

$1,500,000 Set Aside Yearly.

The $1,500,000 set aside annually for the bond issue, it ws pointed out, was not used in full, the sum of $1,250,000, which Mayor Jackson seeks, remaining in the treasury.

Under the law authorizing the bond issue, the board of public works is authorized to hold this $1,250,000 for future amortization and interest charges of the $12,000,000 bond issue; to spend it for unemployment relief in Baltimore, or to use it to reduce the direct taxation in the city. It is this latter alternative the mayor desires.

According to engineers of Gilmore & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who are putting in the steel and concrete, work will be delayed about four days.

Roads Fund Of 13 Million Is Allocated

Virginia Highway Unit Promises Work for 2,000 Men.

Projects Will Be Begun 3 Weeks After U. S. Approves.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 6.—Final allocations of $13,500,000 State-Federal road funds were announced today by the highway commission, with the promise by Chairman H. G. Shirley that 2,000 men would be put to work within three weeks of approval of Virginia's plans by Federal authorities.

For the most part the program remained in the form announced tentatively prior to four public hearings held last week for the construction districts.

The $360,000 toll-free bridge over the Elizabeth River at Norfolk, the subject of a bitter controversy between Portsmouth and Norfolk representatives at the hearing here last Friday, was given final approval by the commission.

Fund for New Bridge.

An allotment of $89,500 was made in the final draft for a new bridge over the C. & O. Railroad at Thirty-fourth street in Newport News, whose citizens asked for such an appropriation at the hearing here.

Of the $89,500 for the Newport News project, $69,500 was taken from the $159,000 tentatively allocated for a grade crossing elimination job on the C. & O. at Clifton Forge, and $20,000 additional was provided, leaving $89,500 granted for the Clifton Forge project in the final apportionment.

A by-pass which the State proposed to build around Fredericksburg, on route 1, was dropped because of the concerted opposition of Fredericksburg business interests. The approximately $235,000 alloted for the route was redistributed, with the Fredericksburg district getting $159,980 less of the total allocations.

Underpass at Chase City.

A proposed overhead bridge over the Southern Railway at Chase City also was dropped, and an underpass to eliminate a grade crossing over the Southern at Franklin was substituted. The amount involved was $50,000.

The Virginia program now goes to Charles Moorefield, district engineer of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, who will submit it to his superiors with his recommendations. It must be approved by Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau, and finally by Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture, of which the public roads bureau is a subdivision.

While not predicting how long the program would be in the hands of officials at Washington, Shirley asserted that a week after Secretary Wallace's signature was affixed, 1,000 men from relief rolls would be put to work on maintenance of primary and secondary roads in Virginia.

Heavy Projects Off Till Fall.

Two weeks after the first crews begin work, he said, another 1,000 would be employed on numerous small secondary road projects throughout the State.

Considerable time probably will elapse, he indicated, before primary road and bridge projects could be in process and absorb the remainder of the 5,300 men the highway department has guaranteed the Government it will employ.

It will probably be fall before a real beginning can be made on the heavy projects, he said.

Tobacco Inspection Day.

Upper Marlboro, Md., Aug. 6 (AP). Southern Maryland tobacco growers will attend the annual inspection day program at the University of Maryland extension service experimental tobacco plots here tomorrow. Extension service officials will explain results of experiments with fertilizers and the rotation of crops.

"The Farmer Takes a Wife" Also Takes on New Flavor in Motion Picture Form

Fonda Plays Original Role; Talkies Have Birthday; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

When the Fox picturization of "The Farmer Takes a Wife" opens on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday of this week, Washington theatergoers will see a play of entirely different flavor from the one which opened last season on the stage of the National.

In transcribing the Frank B. Elser-Marc Connelly collaboration into terms of celluloid drama, Edwin Burke, the adaptor, has concentrated on the love story at the sacrifice of much of the quaint atmosphere that asserted itself in the stage version.

He also has seen fit to drop many of the characters that were important to the atmospheric fidelity with which the original play treated of a picturesque era in the development of America and the speeding up of transportation.

To compensate for this, in small part, he has inserted a bit in which John Wilkes Booth, as a callow youth traveling the canal with his father, Junius Brutus Booth, remarks casually, when shown a picture of a rising young politician from Illinois by the name of Abraham Lincoln, that he never has heard of Mr. Lincoln. When told that he will hear much of him in future, since he is destined for greatness, he expresses the opinion that Mr. Lincoln probably will hear of him, too, because he is to become an actor, like his father, and also will become famous!

No Longer the "Canawl."

But the most serious of Mr. Bruke's offenses is that he has dropped the pronunciation of "canawl" and permits the Erie to be known merely as a canal! This is an inexcusable affront to those who deemed its provincialism one of the principal charms of "The Farmer Takes a Wife."

Two of the original cast appear in the roles which they created. They are Henry Fonda, who here emphasizes the fine impression he made on the stage, and Margaret Hamilton, whose role of Lucy Gurget seems far smaller in the picture than it did in the play.

Sam Weaver, on the screen, becomes the canal boat owner who takes Dan Harrow into partnership—played by Roger Imhof—instead of the sturdy opponent of the railroads, who attempted to bunt a locomotive off the track and came out second best. That part in the play was splendidly done by Ralph Riggs, the dancing Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court in "Of Thee I Sing." It was his first dramatic role, incidentally.

Bickford Lends Color.

Mr. Fonda, of course, plays his role with fine effect, since he has, in a manner of speaking grown up with it, but it would be senseless to contend that the diminutive Miss Janet Gaynor can hold a candle to June Walker in the part of Molly Larkins, the canawl cook, who occasioned the battle at the canal's edge between Dan, ostensible coward, and Jotham Klore, bully of the waterway, a little better played on the screen by Charles Bickford than it was on the stage by Gibbs Penrose.

"The Farmer Takes a Wife" is a well-made and pictorially beautiful film. Just why it should seem inferior to the original stage version of the play is extremely hard to determine. The fact remains, however, that it gives that impression.

To those who did not see the play, this, naturally, will be a matter of no concern. It may not be even to those who did, in view of the greatly expanded breadth of scene which the picture affords.

I quote brief excerpts from a cordial, if slightly challenging, note from Helen I. Burton, who employs an unique technique in teaching children how to "act," which, I suspect, are self-explanatory:

"The Children's Theater has the privilege of presenting the first program on the Rambling Theater—scenes from their own version of 'The Taming of the Shrew.' The Children's Theater is trying to raise the standard of children's dramatics. It is a difficult task and will take time, but it can be done. May I quote Ann Ives at this point? She saw our demonstration lesson at the Arts Club. Miss Ives said: Those children know what they are about. Continue to train them the way you have started and you will produce a better group of Community Players than we have at present.'

"Can't you possibly find time to observe the work of these children? If you give us the axe, so be it—but it won't stop us.

"I was deeply interested in your dramatic column in Sunday before last's paper, wherein you spoke of Shirley Temple and the dearth of juvenile talent in the District. We do not share your doubts. Give us an opportunity to display to you our histrionic wares."

In extenuation, I can only say that it has not been disinclination, but unfortunate combinations of circumstances that have prevented my seeing Miss Burton's juvenile acting groups long before this. I trust the Rambling Theater will ramble somewhere near my beaten path.

"Trilby" Triumphs.

"Trilby," favorite play of 40 years ago, continues a second week at the Roadside Theater, where it has been attracting capacity audiences throughout its run.

The Roadsiders are doing the original Paul M. Potter dramatization of the George Du Maurier novel of the Paris Latin quarter, in which Wilton Lackaye, Virginia Harned, John Glendinning, Rose Coghlan and Burr McIntosh achieved such a resounding triumph back in the gay Victorian year of 1895.

It is interesting in this connection to note that Walter McIntosh, the "Laird" of the present revival, is a cousin of Burr McIntosh, who created the role of "Taffy" and played it with Lackaye in the 1905 and 1915 New York revivals of the play, which up to that time still was taken seriously by its audiences—something that is not true at the present time, when "Trilby" seems hopelessly dated and a fair target for laughter and hisses for the villain.

One suspects that Mr. Lackaye is turning in his grave at this.

Speaking of the Roadsiders—and don't tell me your memory is THAT short—virtually all of the original cast have been secured for the second season revival of "Murder in the Red Barn," next production at the Roadside, beginning next Monday night. Eugene Kressin once more will personify the villainy of the piece, with Janet Coon opposite and Thomas M. Cahill, Aileen Sanford, Harold Stepler and Frederick Rand in the parts they "created" in this time-honored old thriller out at the shoe-heel factory last summer. More fun!

"Talkies" Have Birthday.

It is Mr. Robbin Coons who takes an Associated Press wire in hand to remind me that yesterday was the ninth birthday of the talking cinema.

Shirley Temple wasn't born yet, Mae West was just a sensational stage name, John Gilbert was still making cinematic love to Greta Garbo and Will Rogers was twirling ropes behind the footlights on that August 5, 1926, when New York saw the world premiere of Vitaphone.

It was just a novelty, was the consensus in Hollywood after the first talking screen program, which featured Will H. Hays in an address celebrating the occasion, Marion Talley and Giovanni Martinelli singing operatic arias, Mischa Elman playing a violin solo and the feature, "Don Juan," with John Barrymore, "silent" except for synchronized score and clanking of sword blades.

It was mainly the Warner Brothers concern, which had espoused Vitaphone as a last hope in the movie struggle, that took the occasion very seriously. Even then, they were making ready Al Jolson's talkie debut, "The Jazz Singer," to be released January 23, 1927, followed by Jolson in the "Singin' Fool," which emphasized what "the jazz singer" had stated—the public was willing to spend millions for talking pictures.

Then Came the Revolution.

Then Hollywood began a frantic revolutionizing of its industry. In 1928 none of the "ten best" pictures were talkies; in 1929 there was not a "silent" on this "film daily."

To silent film fans (if any) who have never seen a talkie, however, there are still many memory-stirring names whose owners are in pictures.

Wallace Beery, the late Marie Dressler, Warner Baxter, Norma Shearer, William Powell and Gary Cooper must be included in any list of players whose talkie fame surpassed their silent.

But the stage provided Hollywood with the bulk of its newer stars. Claudette Colbert, Clark Gable, Charles Boyer, Will Rogers, Helen Hayes, Ann Harding, Mae West, Katharine Hepburn and a score or more other top-rank names. Shirley Temple, of course, "just happened."

The talkies "finished" Emil Jannings in Hollywood, though he returned to star in Germany. John Gilbert never regained his silent screen popularity. Clara Bow, Billie Dove and May McAvoy were among the silent stars who bowed out in favor of domesticity, but there were many who merely bowed out—because of what happened August 5, 1926.

Tempus, you will observe, is still at it!

The moonlight cruises of the S. S. Potomac are growing increasingly popular. Many organizations are chartering the steamer for down-the-river outings. This week's reservations include those of the Union Cabmen's Union, which seems like a lot of "union" for one name; Sigma Phi Gamma Sorority, Anacostia Lodge F. & A. M., Recreational Association of the Department of Agriculture, Washington Terminal System Lodge, No. 6, and Alexandria Post, No. 24, of the American Legion. The Potomac makes nightly voyages down the Potomac, leaving the Seventh street wharf at 8:45 and returning at 11:45.

Sudden Realization Note.

Officials Probe Report Of Many Dead Fish

Richmond, Va., Aug. 6 (AP).—Mack Hart, game commission secretary, said today that two officials have been sent to investigate reports of numerous dead fish being found in Opequon Creek, near Dadesville, in the Winchester area.

W. Midyette, supervising game warden of the northern district, and H. A. Bailey, sanitary engineer, were expected to press an inquiry today, Mr. Hart said.

Is on Her Way to Hollywood

It was inevitable after her performance in "The Unfinished Symphony," seen last season on the screen at the Belasco Theater, that Marta Eggerth, blonde, Hungarian operatic actress, should have been signed for picture-making in Hollywood. She is now preparing to leave her native country to take up her duties as a star on the lot at Universal City, Calif. It is expected by West Coast executives of Universal that this talented artiste will arrive in their midst next month. She will be a real addition to Universal's stellar roster.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, Aug. 6.

HAROLD LLOYD is leaning over the transom of a door. He says to Adolphe Menjou and Lionel Stander: "You can pull me over on that line if you want to." A blonde lady sitting in a director's chair says to me:

"He would. He would. I'm not going to watch. He'll hurt himself."

The blonde lady is Mildred Davis Lloyd. She doesn't visit the studio often to watch her husband work. This is her first trip to the set of "The Milky Way." She used to be Harold's leading lady on the screen. During the conversation I ask her, "Do you ever get the desire to act again?" "Often," she answers. "I've got it now. That's why I don't go to the studio very much."

Lloyd, Menjou, Stander and Verree Teasdale are rehearsing a scene for Director Leo McCarey and it is very amusing.

• • • •

Harold Lloyd rehearses with his glasses off. When he puts them on you know it is "a take." He is a quiet workman. Speaks in a soft tone and seems to be certain of everything he is to do. After each rehearsal there is a hurried conference with Director McCarey, who is one of the best comedy directors in the business. He works with the writers, while the scenario is in preparation. He originates many lines and pieces of business with the players while shooting the flicker.

There are many rehearsals. It is late in the afternoon. Harold is still saying, "You can pull me through the transom" and Mrs. Lloyd is still saying, "I won't watch," when I go to visit other sets.

THEY are filming a scene in a water tank at United Artists for "Barbary Coast." Director Howard Haks says the word and Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea start acting. But the big actor in this particular sequence is a trained seal.

McCrea and Miss Hopkins utter words meaning "I love you" to each other and when they do the seal is supposed to applaud. This action gives the scene what is known as "a touch." A special trick seal was hired. The trainer is out of the focus of the camera and gives the signal for the seal to applaud.

The trained seal forgets its training. Instead of applauding, it turns about and flops into the the tank. Everyone pleads with the seal to come on out. But the seal keeps swimming about. For about two hours men with rubber boots on parade about the tank trying to capture the seal while other men stand outside and wave fish at the seal, trying to tempt it to come near. This shows how long it takes to film those "touches."

• • • •

Johnny Weissmuller is swimming in the lagoon at Metro for "Tarzan Returns." But Johnny obeys instructions. He swims the length of the lagoon for Director James McKay and shouts to him when he ses his shadow in the water. Large sun reflectors are placed at regular distances on both banks of the shore and Weissmuller must stop swimming, regardless of the fact that he is being chased by animals, when his shadow in the water interferes with the photography.

IT WAS with Burns Mantle, who was in Hollywood for several days last week, that I went on the set of "A Night at the Opera," where Groucho, Chico and Harpo Marx are performing for the camera—and the players on the set. If it wasn't for the camera and the microphone, Mr. Mantle might have believed he was sitting on the aisle in one of his Broadway theaters.

For it was a theater set, with a regular stage and orchestra seats. Mr. Mantle sat on the aisle, of course, and spoke to George S. Kaufman. Soon Groucho, Chico and Harpo joined them. Up on the stage Kitty Carlisle walked about and pretended to be singing. Two large playbacks stood where the orchestra should be and when Director Wood gave the signal they started broadcasting. Out of one playback came the singing voice of Miss Carlisle and out of the other loudspeaker came the voice of Allan Jones. They both had recorded the song before and now Director Wood was interested in getting close-ups of Miss Carlisle.

Mr. Mantle was very interested in the performance of Kitty Carlisle and the two playbacks. The orchestra seats were occupied by extras, who had been hired to be an audience, and by players in the opera who weren't in this particular scene.

The camera was in front of the audience and was only busy in photographing Miss Carlisle when the two playbacks completed the aria, the extras sitting in the orchestra started to applaud—which was what they were supposed to do—and who should join them in the applause? Burns Mantle. A dramatic critic applauding! It's too bad the camera wasn't facing him so that Broadway could see. This is what happens to a dramatic critic in Hollywood. He applauds.

Culbertson On Bridge

The Trap Pass.

The "trap" pass has fallen into ill repute lately because it has been so much abused. The failure to make a takeout double or overcall with a powerful hand of distributed strength has its uses, but, like the psychic bid, it must be used sparingly. The danger of trap passes on hands which are generally strong does not, however, apply to hands containing one long solid suit. It is in many cases wise to keep quiet with such hands while there is still any chance that the opponents will wind up in a notrump game. Even very good players, if unimpeded in their notrump bidding, will make no attempt to reach a game in a minor suit.

A Trap That Trapped.

	♠ J 2 ♡ A K 10 4 ◇ K 9 5 ♣ K 7 4 3
♠ A K Q 8 7 3 ♡ 7 5 ◇ 8 4 2 ♣ 9 6	N W E S	♠ 9 6 ♡ 9 8 6 3 2 ◇ 10 6 ♣ Q J 5 2
	♠ 10 5 4 ♡ Q J ◇ A Q J 7 3 ♣ A 10 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1◇	Pass	1♡	Pass
1NT	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

North and South could have made five diamonds without difficulty, losing two spade tricks by discarding South's losing club on the high heart. Yet the series of bids by which they reached three notrump can not be greatly criticized. South made close to a minimum opening bid and after North's One-Over-One response, decided that a minimum rebid of one notrump would be more likely to keep his side out of trouble than a rebid of two diamonds. With three honor-tricks and a fit in diamonds, North felt sure that game was worth playing for and, with one complete justification, jumped to three notrump.

All this time West had been securely silent, nor did he make the mistake of doubling three notrump. Overjoyed because South was the declarer and the luck of the opening lead would play no part, West laid down his six top spades and set the contract two.

West's hand was fully strong enough for an overcall, yet it would have cost him a game, since neither North nor South had enough in spades to risk notrump and they would have been driven to a final contract of five diamonds.

Hello, Again!!

New York, Aug. 6.

What happened to me shouldn't happen to a dog!!! I spent the second week of my vacation at Deal, N. J., and the first day at the West End Casino was sheer pleasure. Pretty girls pressed around me for autographs, the band leader begged me to tell him my favorite musical number, photographers snapped my picture. The second day, Dave Wilentz, prosecutor in the Hauptmann case, arrived on the beach and half of my clientele deserted me. An hour later Sophie Tucker arrived and half of the remaining left me flat. At 3 o'clock, there was the rumble of heavy feet and Max Baer and Buddy Baer blotted out the sun. Now I was quite alone. At 3:30 Prof. Atlas, the strong man you see in the magazine ads tearing up iron girders, eased into the pool and 5 minutes later there arrived Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey and I. J. Fox, the big fur trapper, and Mayor Ellenstein of Newark. At 3:45 Bugs Baer, Marvin Schenck and Ted Husing joined this remarkable assemblage, and 20 minutes later, s'help me, Little Billy, the No. 1 man of the midgets, skipped through the toll gate. I spent the lonesomest week of my entire life and, I repeat, what happened to me shouldn't h. t. a d.

While I was away from my beat, things happened. I see by the papers that a baby was born to June Winchell. I have had many scraps with the youngster's old man, and we will never be friends, but this does not prevent my heartiest best wishes to the newest Young Man of Manhattan. I give him the classic forecast of the race track: "Weather Clear, Track Fast," for at that age, the weather is always clear, the skies always blue and sunny, the track always lightning fast.

We had a swell week in Chicago. I don't know when I've so enjoyed myself. To my amazement, the Chicago newspaper men went out of their way to welcome an outlander to their city and I'll never forget the lesson they gave me in hospitality, or how much it means to a visitor to get the glad hand. Ashton Stevens, dean of drama critics; Gail Borden, Charlie Collins, Jay Howard, Charlie Gilchrist, Dynamite Sokol, Clark Rhodenbach—a grand crowd of guys, and plenty helpful. I was nervous when I arrived but they wiped it out. Faithful "Rasputin," Chicago character, met me at the station, delivered me to Frank Bering at the Sherman. Louis Lipstone, manager of the rival theater, was the first to call on me. George Givot, Gus Van, Rosie Dolly and Irving Netcher, Ben Pollock, Joe Lewis, the clown, and Joe Louis, the fighter; Walter St. Denis, Hype Igoe—all of these were so darn nice that I'll never forget my trip to Mayor Kelly's city.

Even my last view of Chicago was thrilling. We left on the 1:30 a. m. plane of the American Airlines immediately after our last show at the RKO's Palace, and the city was spread beneath us, an electric tapestry. The more blase of the passengers promptly went to sleep. Not Dave Vine and myself. We stayed up the whole night, anxious to see everything. The big Douglass plane hurtled on to fog-bound Detroit, then to Buffalo and the experience was a deep thrill. Sunrise above the clouds is the most breathtaking thing that has ever happened to me, and the splendor of the spectacle is not to be set down on paper. The stewardess on our plane was named Nina, a swell-looker who could fit into an Earl Carroll line. She looked most beautiful early in the morning when she served coffee and rolls and orange juice.

I see by the papers, too, that Prince Alexis Mdivani was killed in an automobile accident. To the end of his fast and furious existence, the youngster maintained his tempo. The car was racing along at 85 miles an hour. I've driven that fast, and a bit faster. When we went to Miami the temptation to press the gas down to the floor on open roads was overyhelming. Speed is its own anesthetic, dulls your caution in its own swift flight. But I won't drive that fast again. Somehow or other, this partcular accident has scared me.

Returning to Broadway, I find the old street a bit panicky because of the continued trend to the East Side. With Barney Gallant, Gil Boag, John Perona, Sherman Billingsley, the Versailles, Leon and Eddie's, the Famous Door, the Waldorf "21," the St. Regis and half a dozen other supper clubs near Fifth making ambitious plans for the fall, Broadway fears to read the handwriting on the wall. Guy Lombardo will go into the Gil Boag Embassy, Eddie Duchin will go into the Plaza, Phil Harris is headed for the Waldorf—all of these will bring additional customers to the East Side and away from Broadway.

Bad news at the Capitol, which is in its last week of vaudeville. Bad news, that is, for vaudeville actors because available weeks of employment are shrinking. Standard vaude acts now can be found throughout the country working on radio "amateur" hours. Acts that used to get $1,500 a week now are happy to get $450 and less. However, vaudeville will come back. Motion pictures regularly hit slumps in product. Theaters with great flickers don't need vaudeville aid, but when the pictures weaken theater managers will rush in "name" hands and stage attractions.

B-7-35

STRANGE as it seems, William R. King, elected Vice President of the United States, was permitted by a special act of Congress to take office on foreign soil. King was elected on the Democratic ticket with Franklin Pierce, but he was ill in Cuba when Pierce took office on March 4, 1853. Because his health would not permit him to return to Washington for the inaugural ceremonies, Congress passed an act which allowed him to take his oath of office in Cuba.

Vice President King returned to this country not long afterward, but he never was able to assume active duties of his office. He died in Alabama the month after his inauguration. Diplomat and statesman, his foreign office work in France is credited with having blocked a French protest against the United States' annexation of Texas.

Strange as it seems, none of the famous pyramids of ancient Egypt is as large at the base as the one erected by an ancient Mexican civilization near what is now Mexico City. This huge pyramid, although shorter in height than the huge Egyptian examples, covers a greater area at the base than the Great Pyramid. The Mexican structure, called the "Pyramid of the Sun," measures a few feet more than the Great Pyramid.

Mexican pyramids were built as altars for religious ceremonies, while those of Egypt served as tombs for the dead rulers. Yet, strangely enough, these monuments on opposite sides of the earth are of strikingly similar design.

O'Mahoney Awarded Win Over Savoldi on Foul in 25 Minutes

Champion, Out of Ring, Is Drop Kicked Twice By Former Grid Star

By Bill McCormick.

DANNO O'MAHONEY, undisputed heavyweight wrestling champion—well practically undisputed champion—won on a foul from Jumping Joe Savoldi, after 25 minutes of the usual before a throng of 8,000 at Griffith Stadium last night.

The termination of the big Irishman's first "defense" of his newly gained laurels was novel in some respects, and paves the way for a return exhibition in Chicago or Boston or some other spot infested by the grappling group. It involved two separate and distinct fouls, which sent the O'Mahoney toppling ignominously into the diamond dust around the Nats' home plate and the flattening of an imported referee by the disgruntled and disqualified loser.

Champion Butted Out.

O'Mahoney had been belaboring Savoldi no end with a series of neatly applied and apparently excruciatingly painful holds when the former Notre Dame gridiron star butted him from the ring with a flying tackle. Danno clambered back to the platform outside the ropes, and Savoldi, who had made numerous ineffectual attempts to land his famed—or notorious, as you prefer—flying drop-kick on the handsome map of Ireland which is the champion's face, grabbed the ropes and made a beautiful three-point landing with his vaunted weapon of offense.

Down went Danno to the bottom of the ringside, but he bounced up again and just as he attempted to re-enter the ring, Savoldi again caught him on the chin with both feet in the flying drop kick. Down went Danno again.

He was up again before you can say County Cork, back in the ring and eyeing cautiously when Referee Sam Segal raised his hand indicating that Savoldi had been disqualified.

Savoldi immediately planted a haymaker on the chin of Referee Sam Segal and Referee Sam Segal immediately bit the dust. By the time he was revived, the law in all its majesty had swooped down upon the ring and peace reigned once again.

Welsh-Millman Defeated in Doubles

Lose 6-4, 14-12, in Stirring Match; Parker and Shields Win.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Although furnished some bulldog opposition by Barney Welsh, of Washington, and Jess Millman, of Los Angeles, Frank X. Shields and Frankie Parker, top-seeded team in the Eastern Grass court championships at Rye, N. Y., today finally gained the fourth round of the men's doubles.

Shields, Hollywood, movie actor, and Parker, Spring Lake, N. J., schoolboy, third and fourth ranking players of the country, respectively, outlasted the newly-formed opposing combination to win 6—4, 14—12. Welsh, slim, wiry National Public Parks champion, joined forces with the husky Millman to provide the favored team a rapid succession of worrisome moments. It was the second match Welsh and Millman have played together.

Shields matched his pace in the team event by gaining the quarter-finals in the singles at the expense of Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla., 7—5, 6—1, after trailing 3—5 in the first set.

Three Eliminated.

Two women favorites and one male star fell by the wayside today. Eleanor Jane Sharp, of Pasadena, Calif., seeded third, and Mrs. Penelope McBride, of Short Hills, N. J., seeded fifth, were the women top-notchers to be toppled. J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, seeded eighth and recent Southampton finalist, was the other star to fall.

Mrs. Agnes Lamme, of Rye, N. Y., upset Miss Sharp, beating her by 6—0, 0—6, 6—3.

The steady back court play of Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., upset Mrs. McBride, 7—5, 6—3.

Exceptional shots made by Harold Surface, young Missouri Valley champion of Kansas City, Mo., put Hall out of the tournament, 6—3, 7—5.

In addition to the downfall of the favorites, the debut of Sidney Wood, Davis Cup alternate, featured today's play. He met Haines Stockton, of Spring Lake, N. J., in the first round and beat him in straight love sets, and then disposed of Lieut. R. M. Watt, U. S. Navy, 6—4, 6—4.

Fish Mob Bathers; Whale Impertinent

Whale of Fish Story Season Promised for '35.

Atlantic City, Aug. 6 (U.P.).—The 1935 fish story season was under way today, with old records already toppling right and left.

Bathers here were buffeted and bumped about today by droves of weakfish, pursuing minnows. Head-on collisions were reported in triple figures but nobody swallowed them (the fish).

50,000 Watch Louis Bout Tonight

Negro Is 2-1 Favorite at Chicago; Levinsky Predicts Victory.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Fifty thousand spectators will pay $200,000 tomorrow night to see if Joe Louis, the Detroit bomber, can take it like King Levinsky gives it.

In a ring pitched over the pitcher's box at Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox, Louis, winner of spectacular knockouts in 23 professional bouts, will meet Levinsky, Chicago's eccentric but powerful walloper in a battle scheduled for ten rounds or less.

Not since 1927, when Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney fought before a record-breaking crowd in Soldiers Field, has there been such a rallying to a fight in Chicago. The general opinion seems to be that Louis will win, but the main point was what will happen if Levinsky pitches one of his wild haymakers from center field and drops the brown bomber.

Doubt Lurks.

Louis probably never will have to take it, because in his amazing 12-month career, he has been a merciless, quick finisher of his opponents. But lurking in Levinsky's powerful fist is the doubt.

Levinsky is a wild-swinging, desperate puncher with a record of having floored Tommy Loughran, Mickey Walker, Jack Sharkey, Leo Lomski and others. He has succeeded in belting all of his major opponents to the floor at least once, with the exception of the giant Primo Carnera and Max Baer.

The element of surprise the match presents, the remote possibility that Levinsky may come up with the most stunning victory of the year—a victory over Louis—has fired the imagination of fight fans.

Louis was held a 2-to-1 favorite in what little betting was reported. There were few Levinsky backers, but anything can, and generally does, happen in any battle in which Levinsky participates. When he figures to win, he sometimes loses, and when he looks like a cinch to get licked he comes up with a victory.

Kingfish Prime.

Levinsky never was in better condition. He weighs 198 pounds, the lightest he has been in five years, and has trained as never before. His handlers engaged Art Winch and Izzy Kline, trainers for Barney Ross, world welterweight champion, to get him into condition. They are satisfied with the result of their work, also satisfied that Levinsky has no fear of the dynamite in Louis' hands, for he has fought them all, including Jack Dempsey, Sharkey, Carnera, Baer and others without flinching.

Louis and Levinsky, down to fighting weight, spent today in seclusion. Louis remained at St. Joseph, Mich., at the summer home of one of his co-managers, while Levinsky returned to Chicago tonight from his training camp at Round Lake, Ill. They will meet tomorrow at 12:30 p. m., when they weigh in at the offices of the Illinois State Athletic Commission.

Louis has asserted he will knock out Levinsky as quickly as possible, possibly within five rounds. Levinsky also said he would need five rounds to hammer Louis to the floor, and defeat.

Dizzy Dean's Homer Wins For Cards

Reds Defeated by 6-3; 5th Straight Victory for Champions.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—Dizzy Dean, serving in a relief role, won his eighteenth victory of the season and the fifth in a row for the world champions by knocking a home run with two on the bases in the tenth inning of the Cardinals' series opener today with the Cincinnati Reds.

The third Redbird hurler to see action, Dizzy went to the mound at the start of the seventh and held the Reds hitless for the last four innings. With the score knotted at 3-all in the tenth, Bill Delancey got a lucky double when Goodman failed to see his fly to right field and Kampouris missed the catch after a long run. Charley Gelbert was purposely passed and Leo Durocher sacrificed. Dizzy then broke up the game with his circuit clout into the left grandstand.

Not a Sale, Adams Insists Creditors Must Give Consent to Deal.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—Charles F. Adams and George Preston Marshall today laid the groundwork of a deal to turn over the Boston Braves to new interests.

When the long conference ended early tonight Marshall, owner of the Boston Redskins professional football team and a chain of laundries in Washington, agreed to head a corporation that would put in much new working capital and assume active direction of the National League's last-place ball club.

The deal, according to Adams, will not be a sale, but rather the transfer of the club to a management corporation. During the negotiations, Adams and Marshall fixed the stock price by agreeing on the value of the franchise and subtracting from it the club's liabilities, the most pressing one a note, said to be about $200,000, in the possession of the First National Bank of Boston.

Given Choice.

In the event the bank agrees to play along with Marshall's management corporation, present stockholders of the Braves, during the next five years at the latest, will be given their choice of selling their holdings to the new company at today's fixed price or exchanging them for that amount worth of stock in the new company.

Adams, who controls 9,500 shares of the 14,200 outstanding, explained he and the other stockholders would be protected by retaining ownership of all the ball players now on the club roster.

The value of each of the present Braves was fixed by Adams and Marshall and the latter gave assurances that if his management corporation disposed of any of those players, it would substitute one of equal or greater value or his cash equivalent to what was described as the current stockholders' "pool."

"Nothing definite was accomplished today," Marshall said. "I have made an offer and it remains for Mr. Adams and the club's creditors to act upon it."

Adams, however, indicated he was greatly impressed by Marshall's offer, but pointed out that several other interests had to be approached before the deal could be completed.

During the conference, Adams proved the Braves' solvency by producing the club's books, which showed a profit of $20,000 as of July 1, despite its woeful 1935 playing record. The club had Babe Ruth to thank for most of this surprising profit.

Myer Stars As Nats Win 3d in Row

Mackmen Beaten 11-2, as Hadley Allows Only 7 Hits.

By Shirley Povich.

THOSE two incompatible elements on the Washington club, productive hitting and decent pitching, which have been estranged for most of the season, staged a happy reunion at Griffith Stadium yesterday and the Nats won their third straight ball game.

Together, in perfect harmony, they made short work of the Athletics, who were trailing the newly re-weds by as much as 10 to 1 at the end of the second inning. At the finish it was 11 to 2 in favor of the Nats, who thus lopped another full game off the lead of the sixth-place Athletics and reduced their margin to a game and a half.

Seemingly grateful for the ten runs that the Nats scored for him in pairs of fives in the first two innings, Hadley returned the favor by pitching four-hit ball after the first inning, in which three straight hits had given the Athletics a 1-to-0 lead.

Bill Dietrich went the route for the Athletics for reasons known only to Manager Connie Mack, a gentleman of extreme patience and tolerance. With Mack standing firmly by his right-hander, the Nats couldn't knock him out of the box, even when they followed those five runs in the first inning with five more in the second. Dietrich was still firing at the finish despite the Nats' 14-hit assault.

It was all very misleading the way the A's started off. Moses, Cramer and Johnson singled to right field to score a run before Hadley could get anybody out, but Red Kress started a double play to bring the uprising to a halt and then the Nats swung into action.

There was little intimation as to what was going to follow in that first inning when Kuhel drew a walk and Miles popped out. But then things began to happen. Buddy Myer got the first of his four straight singles, a blow to center, and Jake Powell, taking his clean-up hitting role seriously, smashed a triple to right center to score Kuhel and Myer.

Stone Scores Powell.

Johnny Stone scored Powell with a single to right and after Higgins permitted Bluege's grounder to trickle through his legs for an error, Kress scored Stone from second with a double down the left field line. Bluege raced home with the fifth run of the inning on Bolton's single over second base. Dietrich finally got the side out when Hadley lined to Foxx for a double play.

The Nats came back for more in the second and got five more in an inning somewhat similar to their first, inasmuch as Kuhel again led off with a walk, nine hitters went to the plate and Hadley again provided the final out. But two errors by his outfielders didn't help Dietrich at all.

With one out, Myer singled to

With Shirley Povich

THE tenor of reports from Boston Town would seem to indicate that the control of the Braves will soon pass to George Marshall and the New York group of investors whom he leads. With fresh money they hope to inject some life-blood into the play of the Braves, raise them from the ruck and get a fair return on their investment, but I trust they are not rushing into the deal blindly.

POVICH.

If ever a club's immediate future appeared hopeless, it is the Braves. A hopeless last in the National League, they are 20 games behind, not the lead, but behind the seventh-place Phillies. The Braves are 41 games in the rear of the league-leading Giants and in a fair way toward setting a new low for the league in winning percentage. As an investment they appear to rank only slightly better than Confederate bonds.

This department knows that Marshall is a showman, that he will pull every string, work every trick of the trade to popularize the Braves in Boston. The man parlayed a one-cylinder laundry into the greatest chain south of New York, and in business he is dumb like a fox. But it will require more than freshly-laundered uniforms, dazzling parties for the press and air-conditioned dressing rooms to win back the Boston patronage that the Red Sox have weaned from the Braves.

When and if Marshall takes over the Braves, he will find himself possessed of three big league ball players—Pitchers Frankhouse and Brandt, and Outfielder Wally Berger. Not unless his luck runneth over can he hope to acquire enough material within the next three years to make the Braves a contender. And in invading Boston, of all towns, he is competing against the toughest competition in the big leagues, what with Tom Yawkey's copious money bags always at the disposal of whoever happens to be the Red Sox manager.

SHOULD Marshall complete the deal for the Braves, the baseball future of Bucky Harris will be guaranteed. Marshall is known to have made inquiries as to the 1936 status of Harris with the Nats and in the event that Harris' contract was not renewed by Clark Griffith, Marshall would offer him a managerial contract with the Braves as speedily as he could contact him.

This department yesterday asked Griffith point-blank whether or not Harris would be tendered a new contract for the 1936 season after the one-year pact under which he is working this season expired. With his usual evasiveness, Griffith declined to comment on the matter, declaring that it was never his policy to discuss future managerial contracts until the season ended.

Harris himself smiled when interrogated on the subject of a possible appointment as manager of the Braves if his friend, Marshall, acquired the club. "I haven't given that a thought," he said. "Anyway, it doesn't interest me right now. I want to manage the Washington club as long as Clark Griffith will let me. I've had a few experiences outside of Washington and now that I'm back here, here's where I'm going to stay as long as I have a job."

But at the first announcement that Griffith is ready to dispense with the services of Harris, Marshall is expected to sign Bucky pronto in the event he comes into possession of the Braves. Marshall alone predicted that Harris would win the 1924 pennant in his first season with the Nats and the fondness that he holds for Harris as a big league maanger is exceeded only by the fondness he holds for himself.

In Short—

Bucky Harris and Clark Griffith are distinctly at odds in their estimations of Cecil Travis as a third baseman . . . Griffith maintains that Travis is a fixture in the job with the Nats . . . but it may be significant that for the past week Harris has sent Travis to the outfield for outfielding practice under his special supervision . . . with the sensational Buddy Lewis coming up from Chattanooga next year, Travis' hitting power may be utilized in the outfield while Lewis gets a trial at third base . . . Five double plays started by Red Kress in the last two days have proven no handicap to the Nats . . . With four hits in five times at bat yesterday, Buddy Myer rocketed into third place among the league hitters with his .338 average, only a point behind Hank Greenberg . . . Henry Coppola, whose tonsil operation failed to relieve his sore arm, will not make the next Western trip with the Nats and may be retired for the season . . . Washington's future pitching hopes did not suffer any yesterday when young Dick Lanahan pitched Chattanooga to a three-hit victory over New Orleans . . . Clark Griffith calls Buck Newsom and Earl Whitehill the two greatest loafers in the league after they get big leads . . . but Walter Johnson never bore down out there on the mound until he had to . . . but when he did, he could . . . If Griffith had sent Bobby Burke to Albany instead of Chattanooga, he would realize $1,500 more on the pitcher if Burke were claimed in the draft next fall . . . Buck Newsom is cheering for August 11, his own birthday, as the date of his anticipated blessed event.

Southwest Market Upsets Brewers to Tie for League Lead

Rally to Win In Eighth By 7-5

James Driven From Box, Wahlers Star for Victorious Nine.

A DESPERATE Southwest Market baseball team yesterday defeated the leading Heurich Brewers, 7-5, and went into a tie with the Beermen for first place in the second half of the Industrial League race.

Walter "Jesse" James, Heurich hurler, allowed three runs in the fifth, with his mates leading, 5-0, and then was battered from the hill in the fatal eighth, when four Marketmen connected for solid smacks to pull ahead, 7-5.

Wahlers Star.

Carl Wahler and his brother "Butch" Wahler, contributed to the Marketers' cause. Carl held the Brewers to nine scattered hits, while his brother banged out a lusty triple in that big eighth-inning uprising.

The Brewers now must defeat Gichner's Iron Works Thursday to stay in the Industrial League race. The Market and Beer nines are tied with seven victories and two defeats apiece. Should the cabbage and meat tossers win their remaining game, they will automatically win the second-half title and a play-off for the crown with the Brewers, who won the first half, will result.

West Virginia Golfers Too Good for Virginia

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 6 (AP).—Dr. J. S. Compton, of Bluefield, defending individual champion, today led his West Virginia teammates to a 36-30 victory over Virginia linksmen in their annual interstate golf matches over the old White course.

Dr. Compton and his partner, W. E. Round, of Wheeling, scored 2½ points in their foursome, one of the 22 starters. Scoring was by the Nassau system, in which 1 point is given for each nine holes and one for the entire 18.

center to advance Kuhel to third and Powell brought him home with a fly to Johnson. Stone walked and Bluege singled to center to score Myer. When Stone raced to third on the play, Outfielder Cramer's throw hit him on the leg and as the ball caromed toward the dugout, Stone scrambled to his feet and scored.

Kress prolonged the rally with a single to center that scored Bluege and when Bolton singled to left and Johnson for no reason at all threw the ball into the A's dugout, Kress scored all the way from first base with the Nats' fifth run of the inning.

After that Hadley saw to it that little of importance happened. He did give up a run to the A's on three hits in the sixth, but in the last three innings first base was as foreign to the A's as Somaliland.

Favorites Win In Women's Golf Play

Miss Keeler, who was exempt from qualifying, made her debut in the tournament by brushing aside Nina Owings, 4 and 3, in a match in which she led most of the way.

Mrs. Walper, who paced the qualifying field with an 86 that included 42 putts, won as she pleased from Mrs. Harvey Ingley, 6 and 5. The medalist had a commanding lead at the turn, and merely coasted home.

Miss Kincaid Wins.

The match between Ellen Kincaid, young Beaver Dam champion, who celebrated her seventeenth birthday a few days ago, and Marion Brown, 18-year-old Manor golfer, figured to be the feature of the day, turned out to be a rout. Miss Kincaid, back on her game after a poor showing in the qualifying round, trounced her opponent, 7 and 6, going out in 41, and being only 2 over par for the next three holes.

Mrs. Hope Wilkerson, veteran golfer, eliminated Mrs. Arnold McNitt, 1 up in a ding-dong battle when Mrs. McNitt 3-putted the eighteenth green. In another thriller Mrs. Virginia Stokes put out Mrs. Brice Martin on the nineteenth hole.

Play will be resumed this morning, with Miss Kincaid and Mrs. Walper clashing in the headliner. Miss Keeler will oppose Miss M. Hessey.

Berger Clouts Homer As Braves Win, 4-0

Philadelphia, Aug. 6 (AP).—Bob Smith held the Phillies to three hits today as his Boston mates scored a 4-0 triumph over the locals.

For seven and one-third innings the Braves twirler pitched a perfect game, not allowing a man to reach first base. With one out in the eighth Dolph Camilli hit a clean single to right field.

Walter Berger's twenty-third home run of the season with Randy Moore on first base and one out in the third inning gave Boston their first two runs and a triumph. Before the inning was over two errors by Haslin and a scratch hit by Mallon gave the visitors two more.

Bowman, who relieved Bivin in the fourth, permitted the Braves only three hits the rest of the way.

Walter Holds No Rancor Toward Cleveland Officials, Players.

By the Associated Press.

GERMANTOWN, Md., Aug. 6.—Walter Johnson returned to the farm today, eager for the quiet of the countryside, with no sourness in his heart toward baseball.

The "Big Train" of other years, who resigned Sunday as manager of Cleveland's Indians after undergoing a withering fire from fans and critics all season, tramped over portions of his 550-acre farm with his familiar slouching step. He greeted farm hands and looked over his horses and scampering dogs.

"What a relief to get back to the country," he said, "to get away from it all."

Born and reared on a farm, Johnson has never allowed the sand to slip from his shoes. He says the country always will be home to him.

Only Desire Is Rest.

He wants to forget his life of recent months but he holds no hard feeling against anyone.

"Baseball is like that," Johnson summed it up.

"The Cleveland baseball men are fine gentlemen. I like them. I believe President Alva Bradley always was and still is strong for me.

"And I think most all of my players were for me, that most of them gave 100 per cent of their efforts for me. Some have said Averill was against me. Now, I'll tell you, Earl came to me several times and said it wasn't so, that he was doing the best he could.

"When I left yesterday many of the players came to me with tears in their eyes, expressing their regret that I was leaving and thanking me for what I've done for them. I'll remember their words.

No Plans for the Future.

"The Cleveland club just wasn't as good as I had thought it would be. Some of the players didn't live up to the expectations I had for them. We had injuries that hurt us. I wasn't able to get all I had hoped out of the club. But that's baseball. Looking back over it, I don't think of a single decision I made that I would change now.

"I think it was for the best interest of the Cleveland club that I resigned. The club has begun to pick up a bit and I think it may get going. Steve O'Neil will make them a good leader."

Johnson has no plans for the future. If the Cleveland club orders him to scout during the remaining weeks of the season, he will. Otherwise he'll rest up on the farm.

He doesn't know what next season will bring, and he isn't worrying.

"I may be affiliated with Cleveland next season," he said. "I'm still being paid and, until I'm released, I'm not free to talk of the future."

Would he take a manager's job now if it were offered?

"No!" Johnson shouted, laughing. But next year is a long way off, baseball is a hard life to leave, and the chances are Walter will be in the game.

Cubs Nose Out Pirates On Freak Play, 2-1

Chicago, Aug. 6 (AP).—Wee Roy Henshaw, who makes a habit of beating the Pirates, did it again for the Cubs, 2 to 1, today, but it took a pair of errors on a freak play to give Chicago the victory that cut a full game from the Giants' leading margin.

Ralph Birkofer, Pirate southpaw, allowed the Cubs only four singles, half as many hits as Henshaw yielded, but he brought about his own downfall in the third, when the Cubs scored both of their runs.

After Bill Jurges scratched a single in the third, Henshaw tried to bunt and popped to Birkofer. The pitcher, apparently with the idea of trapping Jurges and getting both runners, intentionally dropped the ball. But he got confused and when he picked it up, heaved it past first base to the right field stand. By the time Suhr got it Jurges was nearing third, so Suhr threw all the way to the left field boxes and Jurges scored.

Blairton Wins Two To Take Loop Lead

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 6.—The Blairton club of the Bi-County Industrial League shot from a tie for second place into undisputed possession of first position by virtue of its double victory over the weekend. Blairton's first victime was Bakerton, defeated, 7 to 6, and the second the erstwhile leaders, Berkley, who bowed, 3 to 2, in a 13-inning game.

In the first game both teams knocked out ten hits, but Rex Cloud, on the mound for the winners, was more effective in the pinches. Ewan led with the stick, getting four safeties. Hockenberry pitched good ball in the second game, allowing only 7 hits in the 13 innings.

Wood Talked Self Out of Davis Cup Finals, He Admits

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 6.—The incompleted final chapter of America's unsuccessful bid for the Davis Cup tennis trophy—why Sidney Wood, jr., was not used—was finished today by Wood himself.

He returned from England on the liner Ile de France and very frankly said he "talked himself out" of the interzone final against Germany.

"I went to Capt. Joe Wear before the series started and said I didn't feel confident," Wood said. "Then as friend to friend, I suggested to him that he use Don Budge and Wilmer Allison in the singles."

Between the interzone series and the challenge round Wood said he regained his form and confidence, but felt it wasn't up to him to suggest another change in the line-up.

"Wear used his best judgment and subscribed to it and still does," Wood said.

Mt. Jackson Wins, Ties for 1st Place

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 6.—Mt. Jackson staged a comeback in the Shenandoah County League today by downing the Strasburg nine, 8-2, to regain a tie for top position.

Rittenour, on the mound for Strasburg, was the victim of poor support, as errors were the main reason for the defeat. Litton, Mount Jackson rookie with only five scattered hits granted, was the winning pitcher.

As a result of the game today, Strasburg and Mount Jackson are again tied for the lead, and Woodstock remains in third place, being two games behind the leaders. Edinburg still remains in the cellar.

Racing Returns to Washington Area Today at Charles Town

Sprint Races Feature on Program

AFTER a month of having their appetites appeased only by the black and white entries and results and an occasional picture. Washington fans will have racing within seeing distance today at the nearby Charles Town Jockey Club track. The popular course, just over the West Virginia State line, opens a four-day meeting to continue through Saturday, which opens a string of turf action in the Washington area that will keep both bangtails and enthusiasts busy until the snow flies and possibly after.

EDDIE SMITH.

Conducted by the Charles Town Horse Show and Racing Association, the abbreviated meeting promises to be a continuation of Charles Town's most successful session which closed on July 7. From the hotdog layout to the lines in front of the payoff windows, everything that goes with a "day at the races" will be offered.

Entries for today reveal a generous number of horses with practically every field due to draw the limit at distances ranging from the day's opening sprint at 5 furlongs to the finale, a test of a mile and a sixteenth. Virtually every horse listed ran at the previous meeting, so the majority of the fans will have a good line on them.

Star Riders in Action.

The meeting will mark a renewal of the riding rivalry of the two Washington boys, Johnny Shanks and Eddie Smith. Shanks nosed out Smith during the last 34-day meeting.

The feature race is the fifth at 6½ furlongs, and it has been the lure for 12 horses. No Man o' Wars, Discoverys, or Omahas or King Saxons will contest, but Racing Secretary W. J. Daly has arranged the weights in a manner that seems to point to an interesting race with a close finish. After all, a $13 mutuel is a $13 mutuel whether it is on the 3-year-old champion or a cheap selling plater.

Horses popular on the smaller tracks clash in the sprint. Canteret, Gagne, Goantell, Decorate, and Tuleyries Wand will not lack backers in the crowd. As usual, the daily double will be conducted on the first and third races, a pair of sprint events today. Post time is 2:30 p. m.

The routes to Charles Town are the same. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is running its usual special train to the track, leaving Union Station at 12:30 p. m. Autoists have their choice of two routes, on the Virginia side of the Potomac River, through Leesburg and Hillsboro, and on the Maryland side through Frederick and Harpers Ferry.

Following the Charles Town meeting, the horses will shift to Cumberland for a 10-day session, starting on August 13. From there it will be on to Marlboro, Timonium, Havre de Grace, Laurel, Pimlico, Bowie and back to Charles Town.

Suffolk Downs Race Track, Aug. 6.

Dear Al:

We had been blaming Clocker Mike for putting the jinx on the firm's selections. He departed for Charles Town last night so we had no excuses today. The Mikeless crew didn't do so bad and didn't do so good. Three winners scampered home—Vote Boy, Hug Again and Center Lane were the good ones. Inasmuch as two a day will keep the boss away, I'm a bit pleased, but not satisfied. If we don't hit five or six pretty soon, I'm going to give Trainer Joe a vacation or take another one myself. It certainly helps the Post-office Department when I don't have winners. Everybody and his stepbrother begin sending in selections trying to get the job. In fact, it's almost time for Bad Check Chief and the rest of the boarding house gang to begin gunning. As I said before, Clocker Mike is at Charles Town. Inspired by that gal in Martinsburg, the clocker may hit his stride at the West Virginia course. BILL.

First race—The Heathen ran a nice third last out and indicated that his ancient legs are in shape once more. With an outing under his belt, he may come through with a purse tomorrow. Commandman is ready and will score if the top one fails. Quick to take care of the others.

Second race—Jubilee Jim has beaten a field of this caliber and seems well placed here. I don't believe the outside post position will hurt his chances. Tugboat Frank and Armful to complete the money bracket.

Third race—Al Neiman should gather himself the winning end of a purse here. He gets in with only steadying weight and Wall to do the riding. Ladino and Cantino should do the No. 1 and No. 2 chasing.

Fourth race—Although he appears to be losing form, I'm going to string along with Bright Bird under the supposition that he has been kidding the public. Cappoquin and Flat Rock appear capable of holding the others safe.

Fifth race—Teralice gets another chance. Light weight and No. 1 post position may make this one improve. Mauro will do the saddle honors and he is a hustler. Happy Go probably would be best at even weights but that 121 pounds may prove too much. Brophy, winner of two races, might be dangerous with that feather impost.

Sixth race—In contrast to passing up Happy Go, I'm going to take Black Highbrow here despite those 123 pounds. Jamboree and Torita are a pair of speedy youngsters and they would battle it out if weight stops the first named.

Seventh race—The Creech entry has a lot of grip on this purse, with Our Mae and Kieva slated to do the running. Glyndon Belle and Saturino shape up as the best of the others.

Eighth race—Currants should like this route and I see no reason for mistakes. St. Moritz for the place and Leana G., the rascal, to show. Trainer Joe likes Mr. Pete.

Break in Corn Carries Wheat 2 Cents Lower

Prospects of Greater Yields Induce Heavy Corn Offerings.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Partly in sympathy with a sharp break in corn futures prices, wheat dropped more than 2 cents a bushel from early highs today despite the influx of unfavorable crop reports.

Wheat closed 1 to 1⅛ cents below the previous finish, September, 90½ to 90⅝, and corn was 1¼ to 2⅛ cents off; September, 75⅞ to 76; new corn crop deliveries at the lowest level in more than a year. Oats lost ½ to ⅝; rye, ¾ to ⅞, and barley was unchanged.

Continued favorable weather in the corn belt with prospects of greater yields and reports that much of the damaged wheat might be used for feeding purposes were contributing influences that accompanied heavy offerings by professionals and commission houses in the corn pit.

Holders Fight Standard Gas Note Extension

Company Seeks to Defer $25,000,000 Payment Five Years.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 6.—Opposition to the plan for extension of notes of Standard Gas & Electric Co. due October 1, developed today with formation of a committee pledged to investigate terms of the proposal.

The group is headed by W. S. Kinnear, New York, who is senior partner of the Wall street firm bearing his name.

"The gravest danger of the plan," it was stated by the committee, "is the fact that a deposit by a noteholder is irrevocable and remains in full force and effect until the plan is abandoned."

Notes included in the extension plan of the company are $14,823,000 principal amount of 20-year 6 per cent gold notes and $9,826,500 principal amount 6 per cent convertible gold notes, due October 1, 1935, and proposed for extension to October 1, 1940.

	Tue.	Mon.
Advances	315	370
Declines	341	233
Unchanged	180	184

Stocks—Bullish excitement, created by the doubling of the General Motors dividend, reacted on the market and the closing was generally lower. Union Pacific, reflecting slim earnings, suffered an extreme decline of 6½ points. The day's trading was active with a total of 1,774,520 shares.

Bonds—Except for unusual activity and strength in New Haven issues, the 3½s advancing 4⅝ points, the list as a whole was stationary or lower. Sales were $9,036,000.

Curb—The advancing oils and utilities met profit taking and the result was an irregular close, with the exception of metals, which held firm. The trading volume was 339,000 shares, compared with 446,000 on Monday.

Grains—Heavy offerings of corn affected wheat values despite crop damaged. September wheat closed at 90½ and September corn at 75⅞, both 1⅜ lower.

Cotton—A moderate opening advance was followed by some realizing sales, but the market closed 1 to 6 points higher, with October at 11.44, an advance of 1 point.

30,000-Share Block Opens Gen. Motors

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—General Motors Corporation common stock opened in the New York Stock Exchange today with a transfer of 30,000 shares at $40.75, up $1.12 and a new 1935 high, after directors late yesterday doubled the dividend rate.

So great was the turmoil around the General Motors trading post that half an hour and the aid of several governors was required to straighten out the tranactions.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 6.—Vacation feelings were strong in the security markets. Bonds were quiet and irregular and the majority of stocks were moderately lower. Turnover in stocks was around 1,750,000 shares, an active first hour being largely responsible for the gain over yesterday's 1,740,000 shares. September wheat closed a cent lower at 90⅝ cents a bushel.

For all the hubbub over General Motors, the stock was by no means a brilliant affair. Investment buying came in by spurts in certain favored shares, such as Telephone, Western Union, Eastman and a few others, and the sugar group was strong. Elsewhere the tendency of buyers to hold off and of the speculative element to take profits held the market in check.

A number of the steel stocks dropped a point or so, including United States common. Pressure on Bethlehem was especially noticeable. General Motors rose to a new high level on an enthusiastic opening, later gained a fraction more and then merely marked time. The best price for the stock was within a fraction of the best in four years. Other motor shares were firm to fractionally lower.

Tobacco shares accompanied the sugars to better prices. Liggett & Myers was the best of the smokers. Sugars moved up 1 to 3 points. Trading was brisk for a while in American Crystal, American Sugar, Cuban American preferred, Great Western and South Porto Rican.

Some buying took place in du Pont, the direct result of the higher General Motors dividend, and the stock opened at the best price in five years on a gain of 1¾ points. Columbian Carbon also perked up, but other chemicals sagged. Oils were weak. Socony gave up a point on the dividend cut. Phillips reached a new top, but failed to stay there. Others were lower. Most of the public utility holding company shares were lower. Foods, metals and rubbers were pressed down.

Bank Credit Deflation.

Deflation of bank credit continues, and this week the member banks in leading cities report a huge drop ni Government bond investments as well, part of the decline being due to redemption of consols.

The unusually large drop of $77,000,000 in "other loans" of reporting member banks in the week of July 31, of which $52,000,000 occurred locally, was too large to be accounted for by falling off in commercial demand for credit and appears to have been mainly a replacement of bank credit by Government money. Just what agency provided the money and how much can not be traced, but it is suspected that some cotton loans or credits held by banks were taken over by the AAA, the Commodity Credit Corporation, or some other agency or combination of agencies.

The Treasury daily statement for August 1 discloses that the Treasury spent for account of the AAA $34,046,311 net on that day, but there is nothing to indicate where the money went or what it was spent for. With the Government on one hand keenly anxious for the banks to take up the burden of financing commerce, industry and agriculture it is curious that, on the other hand, it should be making inroads upon such business that the banks already have on their books.

Next week's member bank statement may disclose a transaction of a reverse nature, or an increase in securities other than Government issues, which also may have a hook-up with Washington. On August 2, the Treasury report for that day reveals the Treasury got back from railroads $26,503,532 net on public works account. In the week of July 31 the banks increased their holdings of "other securities" by $30,000,000, but it is not clear whether the Treasury got $26,503,532 of this through a refunding operation.

RFC Collateral Sales.

The RFC at intervals is selling to the market blocks of railroad equipment trust and other securities taken over from the PWA. Probably this money, at least in part, shows up in the Treasury's PWA account as an excess of receipts. If there were no other transactions on a given day, such sales by RFC with transfer of the proceeds to PWA account would be shown in a corresponding net expenditure by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Since the RFC is spending and taking in such huge sums daily and reporting only the net balance of its transactions in the Treasury daily statement it is impossible to detect relations between the various Government agencies.

Dollars turned strong abroad, probably because of shakiness in the gold currency section rather than because of any special show of confidence in the dollar. On this side as well as in Europe opinion is divided on the outlook for an Italian war in Ethiopia, which all hands round consider would bring a further terrific strain upon Italian financial resources which already are in a rather onerous position. Lire are now well pegged and probably can be kept that way so long as the gold reserves hold out. Sterling was unchanged.

Trade news was of little interest except for the dividend increases announced by two large corporations, General Motors and International Nickel, reported in yesterday afternoon's press after the close of trading. Both dividends reflected business recovery and forecast further improvement; but the markets have been saying all that for some time.

RFC Will Sell Penn. Securities

Pennsylvania Railroad 4 per cent equipment trust certificates amounting to $15,282,000, pledged for a public works loan, will be sold August 15, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation said yesterday.

The RFC, acting as agent for PWA, will accept bids for the bonds up to that date. Bids for all or part of the offering will be accepted.

The securities mature semiannually in blocks of $566,000 beginning January 15, 1936, and running until January 15, 1949.

This is the first sale of Pennsylvania securities by the RFC and PWA, but the railroad has paid off a $3,648,000 loan which it obtained from PWA to buy 1,000 tons of steel rails. PWA still holds large blocks of the Pennsylvania's securities, most of which were pledged for the road's electrification between New York and Washington.

Capital Transit June Net Gains 31.7% in Year

The monthly report of the Capital Transit Co., as filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, shows that net income for June was 31.7 per cent higher than in June last year. This gain of $28,943, however, is subject to adjustment in accord with the wage arbitration, an amount which the company estimates at $59,500. If this is deducted from the June income of $120,224, the resulting net would fall substantially below the figure for June last year, which was $91,281.

Operating expenses have been on the upgrade, but operating revenues for the month of June show a greater gain than operating expenses. This gain so far has not been sufficient, however, to overcome the heavy gain in operating expenses earlier in the year, as the half-year period shows the operating expenses gained 16.4 per cent as against a gain of 10.4 in operating revenue. April was the first comparative month this year when increased operating revenues exceeded the increase in operating expenses.

Depreciation Increased.

The report shows an increase in depreciation for June of 4.5 per cent, and for the six months an increase of 3.7 per cent, but the company still claims "the appropriation for depreciation is considered by the company to be inadequate and application has been made to the Public Utilities Commission for adjustment."

The June report shows operating revenues increased from $719,463.95 in 1934 to $818,265.58, a gain of 13.7 per cent, while during the same comparable periods operating expenses jumped from $483,300.76 to $544,468.24, a gain of $61,167.48, or 12.7 per cent; taxes went up 11.7 per cent; operating income increased from $133,433.04 to $162,591.99, or 21.9 per cent; net income rose from $91,281.06 to $120,224, or 31.7 per cent; depreciation rose from $49,177.37 to $51,379.96, or 4.5 per cent; total operating expenses, taxes and depreciation increased from $586,030.91 to $655,673.59, a gain of 11.9 per cent.

More Passengers Carried.

Revenue passengers showed a gain from 10,768,741 in June, 1934, to 12,868,710 this June, or 19.5 per cent.

During the six-month period operating revenues rose from $4,185,139.14 to $4,621,336.49, a gain of 10.4 per cent; operating expenses increased from $2,770,950.03 to $3,226,736.70, a gain of 16.4 per cent; depreciation went up from $294,243.12 to $305,047.97, an increase of 3.7 per cent; total operating expenses, taxes and depreciation rose from $3,371,955.77 to $3,865,074.38, a gain of 14.6 per cent.

Operating income, however, for the six months' period showed a falling off from $813,183.37 to $756,262.11, a decrease of $56,921.26 or 7 per cent. Net income also dropped during the six months' period from $555,406.15 to $502,898.93, a decrease of $52,507.22, or 9.5 per cent.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—A cheerful tone was registered on the stock exchange today. Considerable activity in industrials was influenced by the strong American market over the week-end. Transatlantic issues and mining shares advanced, while gilt-edged securities and rubbers held steady. Brazilian bonds were dull on fears concerning their debt service, but oil shares were firm on favorable American advices. The market closed firm.

Paris—Hesitancy prevailed on the bourse today pending the forthcoming governmental economy decree laws. Royal Dutch, however, improved, leading other active international issues. Rentes rose fractionally, and the market closed irregular.

Berlin—Business on the boerse was extremely quiet today, prices fluctuating fractionally. The closing was sustained.

Federal Officials to Aid in Planning Single Control Bill.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 6.—Proposals for consolidating legislation to control petroleum are being made as the industry approaches the prospect of the highest annual gasoline demand of record and the best earnings in five years.

On the production end of the business, long torn by strife, Federal officials plan a conference today in Washington to attempt to bring together all ideas into a single piece of legislation for presentation to Congress.

At the same time, the American Petroleum Institute's committee on marketing has drafted a code for fair practices covering transactions between producers and refiners and retail outlets.

After the industry at large has had an opportunity to pass judgment on the new code in meetings throughout the country starting in September, it will go again before the institute and then to the Federal Trade Commission for final approval.

Shape Marketing Code.

It is expected in some trade quarters that the institute's code on marketing may be in shape for final enactment by the time Congress settles on legislation to govern the producing end.

Practices in marketing currently are ruled by a code approved in June of 1931 by the Federal Trade Commission.

Price control is a feature of the new proposals, and there are some in the industry who look to these provisions to prevent a recurrence of the retailing wars which swept the trade last spring.

Demand from motorists now is at a rate which analysts calculate may put the 1935 total to 427,000,000 barrels, counting 42 gallons to the barrel. The previous peak was in 1931 when more than 400,000,000 barrels of gas were consumed.

Despite any unsettling influences either on the producing end or in marketing, earnings statements of 14 oil companies for the first six months of this year showed an aggregate profit of $21,614,000 compared with $17,261,000 during the first six months of last year, the highest level for a first half since 1930.

New York, Aug. 6 (AP).—A series of meetings in all parts of the United States for the purpose of discussing the tentative draft of a proposed voluntary marketing code will be held in the fall, the American Petroleum Institute announced today. The meetings, which are expected to begin early in September, will be attended by representatives of all marketing interests, large and small.

J. C. Penney Sales At Peak; Net Lower

New York, Aug. 6.—Reflecting the general experience of the retail trade, the earnings of J. C. Penney Co., Inc., during the first half of the current year were adversely affected by a declining mark-up due to advancing competition and less stable wholesale markets during the earlier months of the period.

As a result, net profit represented a decline of 15.3 per cent, as compared with the first six months of 1934, notwithstanding that sales for the period represented the largest volume for any similar half year in the company's history, and exceeded those of a year ago by 3.3 per cent.

Net profits for the half year, after charges and preferred dividends, left $5,669,684, or $2.17 per share on the common, compared with $2.59 in the first half of last year.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Aug. 6 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Fair quantities of a few lines of wool were moving. Medium quality semiblood fleece wools were selling at around 57 cents, scoured basis, for strictly combing 56s, ¾-blood, and at around 53 cents for strictly combing 48s, 50s, ¼-blood. Sizable quantities of the short combing 54s and finer territory wools also were moving at prices that show a steady to firmer tendency.

On The Air Today

Looking ahead a bit: Three sets of stars have combined their talents to give the summer audience a triple dose of torrid music. They will be known as the Rhythm Octet—presented on Fridays, beginning the sixteenth, at 6:30 p. m., over a C. B. S. net. WJSV may find difficulty in booking them because of the hour, but when the line-up of talent is considered, I hope the time is managed. The talent is Gould and Shefter, twin piano tinklers; Three X Sisters and the Three Scamps, male trio.

Jack Benny and Frances Langford will give a preview of their new picture, "Broadway Melody of 1936" on the twenty-fifth through an N. B. C. net. The Benny troupe has finished the picture and at present is vacationing.

The "king of jazz" goes to Ben Marden's Riviera on the fifteenth to begin an extended engagement and will be heard several times a week on an N. B. C. web. The gang will all be there—Ramona, the King's Men, Bob Lawrence and Maestro Whiteman himself.

Clifford Barbour gets fired tonight. And by his own father. His first impulse is to look to his sweetheart, Marian, for consolation. It all takes place in "One Man's Family" tonight, WRC, at 7.

• • • •

Gracie Allen was very funny last Wednesday night, so far as I am concerned, in her nonsense with George on the train. Gracie may not be funny to you, but if you havn't heard her lately, give the half-hour a whirl tonight, WJSV, at 9, and see if you can't get a few chuckles out of it.

Ten N. B. C. investigators are now being used by Jerry Belcher and Parks Johnson, who do the interviews Sunday evenings from the streets of New York, to check up on prospective sites. The investigators study the volume of noises made by street cars, subways and traffic. They also count pedestrian traffic, breaking down the passersby into adults and children and by sexes. And they have an eye to the business concern open at the hour of the broadcast.

Thursday night the big radio jackass baseball game comes off at Griffith Stadium. The admission will be 50 cents and the proceeds will go to Children's Hospital. If you never saw a donkey baseball game, this should prove a enlightening and funny as any other. No doubt more so, for Arch McDonald will be the foremost player on the field. All afternoon long Arch describes baseball to thousands of listeners. Nothing could be more amusing than to see Arch playing baseball himself. If those in charge of obtaining the animals for the game are charitable they'll get a particularly sturdy one for the old pine tree.

Thus far little is known of the personnel of the two teams. One is to come from WJSV and the other from the combined WMAL and WRC. It seems significant that Ted Church, of WJSV, and Bill Coyle and Shannon Allen, of NBC, are vacationing.

However, Stanley Bell, John Mayo, Paul Munroe, Harold Gray, Bill Bivens, Larry Elliott, Warren Sweeney, John Laing, Jim McGrath and Uncle Arthur Godfrey and others of the announcing staffs should form a good nucleus for the two teams and every one in town who has his pet peeve in local announcers should be on hand at the ball park Thursday night—in the interests of charity and with the hope that his pet peeve will be tossed neatly over a burro's neck.

The Sunday radio page preference poll will end with the tabulation next Sunday. If your selections are received by Thursday noon, they will be included in the final listing. Just clip the form from last Sunday's Post radio page, or list your five preferred programs on a letterhead. Send to Radio Editor, The Washington Post.

DO WHAT?

"Fix that roof. Every rainstorm means work for me and more stains on the ceiling in our bedroom."

Well, my dear, that's simple. If you'll just turn to the classified section of your morning Post you will find your very question "Who Can Do It?" in big, bold type, and right under it the names of some roofers. Then all you have to do is use the phone—simple?

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XXIV.—Nash Steps Upward.

It must be understood that of the great number of persons who so far have entered the story of Frank Nash, the Bureau of Investigation, beyond the recapture of the momentarily freed convicts in the Leavenworth crush-out, was concerned only with three principals—Holden, Keating and Nash. Other characters like Harvey Bailey had at that time committed no Federal offenses, therefore they were beyond Federal jurisdiction. Many of the acts of which they were guilty, such as the robbery of national banks and the fleeing from one State to another to escape prosecution, since have been made the subject of Federal statutes, and again Frank Nash played his part.

The name of this old bandit is indeed little known when compared to such persons as Dillinger, Baby Face Nelson or Pretty Boy Floyd. Yet as his history unfolds he becomes steadily more important.

There were many repercussions to the arrest of Keating and Holden on the Old Mission golf course. The three women who had lolled in a big car at the club entrance, Lillian Holden, Marge Keating and a third one, who described herself as Mary Phillips, were, of course, arrested. They told a fabricated story of innocence and were released by the police.

Mother Kate Traveled With Karpis Boys.

This had a direct bearing on various State cases, inasmuch as the woman who called herself Mary was in reality Winnie, the wife of Bernard Phillips, the bank robber who had escaped from the golf course. He was wanted for questioning in half a dozen instances involving bank robberies, and when he left town his woman joined him. The police were never able to get him again. Gangdom performed this service in a more unrelenting fashion. His comrades insisted that his poor game of golf that day had been premeditated, so that he could lag in the rear and point out Keating, Holden and Bailey to the raiding officers.

So Big Phil was watched. Always unpopular to a degree, he evidently did some trick in an Indiana bank robbery which did not exactly conform to rules. So, the story goes, he was tortured for hours. Then he was stabbed repeatedly with an ice pick, killed, and thrown into a ditch.

There was another reaction to the arrest of Keating and Holden. A meal had just been laid on a table in an apartment on Ward Parkway in Kansas City. This was the home of Alvin Karpis, late of Kansas State Penitentiary; Fred Barker, also a graduate of the same institution, and Fred's loving mother, Kate, who had taken to traveling with them. Police and law-enforcement officers charge that this trio came together shortly after Alvin's parole in the autumn of 1931 and that Alvin and Fred and Mother Kate were in Kansas City to await, among other things, the release of Arthur (Doc) Barker from Oklahoma State Penitentiary. In doing so, they took no chances, as apparently they were in enemy territory. Some eight months before, following a robbery, the sheriff at West Plains, Mo., had approached a car containing two young men and an elderly woman. He had sought to question them, but the blaze of gunfire interrupted, and the officer fell dead. Witnesses identified the pictures of Alvin and Fred and Mother Kate, but they never had been caught. Nor were they captured now. The telephone rang. An excited voice gave the news of the Old Mission capture. Out of the apartment hurried Mother and Fred and Alvin, once more on the run, and within half an hour they were out of town.

Another echo came in the trial of Harvey Bailey for the Fort Scott bank robbery, when he was sentenced to from 10 to 50 years in the Kansas State Penitentiary.

Johnny Lazia Enters Politics.

With these details cleared away, it is necessary to detail the history of a new character who now must take his place in the story of Frank Nash. His name was Johnny Lazia, a person of much prominence and an equal amount of mystery. Whether he truly belongs may never be decided; after all, this is not a court of record.

A number of years before, this young man had walked out of Missouri State Penitentiary, freed as the result of activity by influential persons in Kansas City.

Lazia's original sentence to prison had been for 15 years on a charge of first-degree robbery, but the judge had remitted three years, from the bench. Then the influential persons signed the application for clemency. As the result of all this influence, even Lazia's full citizenship was restored.

Johnny Lazia began to take a place in the affairs of Kansas City. He aligned himself with a dominant political party and worked among the Italians. He started, among other things, an Italian political club, but never sought office for himself.

Gradually Lazia became powerful, his attentions centering more and more upon the police department. At last it was rumored in the underworld that any friend of Johnny Lazia need have few fears of prosecution. He controlled such money-making devices as liquor and gambling.

With this introduction, Johnny Lazia must momentarily drop out of the narrative, except for two statistical references by which the record may be completed. They are:

Convicted, 1934, United States Court, evasion of income tax. Sentenced to 12 months county jail and $2,500 fine. Appealed.

Take a Cottage At Wisconsin Lake.

Johnny Lazia exerted tremendous influence before he died; no one denies that. But, having thus briefly come upon the stage, he must wait in the wings while the narrative of crime takes up the more familiar characters of Frank Nash and those who formed his circle. There was a period of hiding, of course, following the Keating and Holden pick-up.

During this time, Verne and Vi took a cottage at Lake Geneva, Wis. Frank Nash and Frances visited with them most of the summer, except for such times as Frank and Verne were forced to be away "on business."

The resort soon became a stopping-off place for those high in the world of disrepute. It was during one of these periods of visitation that George Zeigler's failing secrecy again began to manifest itself. It came during the usual conversation about golf, dogs, hunting, landscape gardening. Shotgun George had been reading a newspaper. Suddenly he threw it to the floor and glared about him.

"You know," he exclaimed, "we're all a bunch of suckers. The real dough these days comes from snatching somebody. Somebody big and holding them for a real ransom—like a quarter of a million, something like that."

"Cut out that kind of talk," Frank Nash interrupted. "Do you want the old maids who own this house to listen in on us?"

"Trouble with you fellows," said George Zeigler, "you haven't got any guts. When I get ready to pull a snatching job, I'm going to pick some tough guys. Those Barker-Karpis boys, they'll go for a real job."

"Then take 'em and stop talking!" answered Miller angrily. Zeigler straightened and looked about him vaguely, as though awakening from heavy sleep. The conversation reverted into its usual channel, golf and clothes and dogs and travel and automobiles.

Mob Celebrates Barker Release.

While the Nash-Miller crowd rested at Lake Geneva, Alvin Karpis and Freddie and Mother Barker were enjoying an equally quiet time at White Bear Lake, Minn. Of course, there was gambling to be done in the old club, where Frank Nash once had worked as a croupier. There also were frequent visits to St. Paul.

Likewise, the Millers and Nashes tired of Geneva at times, and spent week-ends in the Minnesota metropolis. Here the Barker-Karpis crowd and the Miller-Nash gang mingled, flitting about night clubs until 3 o'clock in the morning, new clothes for the women and endless talk of hospitals, operations—and more clothes.

Week-ends over, they all returned to Geneva or White Bear, where, at the latter spot, Helen and Mrs. Barker were all alone for a time. "The boys" had gone to Concordia, Kans. Within a short time there was tremendous excitement concerning a bank in the Kansas town. When the boys came home they had $4,000 apiece in fresh money.

With the coming of autumn there was another foregathering in St. Paul. Frances Nash was recuperating from an operation and as an aid to convalescence, everybody dropped into the old gathering places in the Minnesota city, there to meet a new member of the Barker-Karpis mob. He was Arthur (Doc) Barker, just out of McAlester State Penitentiary, having received a generous parole from a life sentence for murder. Everybody celebrated. Finally, Frank Nash took a long step upward.

Has Broken Arm, Goes to New York.

Frank had broken an arm in an automobile accident early in the season and it had not healed properly. Back in New York, where Verne had connections, there were big doctors and Verne felt that Frank should meet the mob in the big town, just on general principles.

So now it was to New York, while Vi, Miller's girl, took her turn in the hospital for one of those operations which gangsters' consorts seem to need so frequently. Verne went on to New York without her, taking Frank and Francis. This was quite a trip.

Life for Miller and the Nashes became a round of the gayer phases of New York. There were plenty of parties—the Nashes and Verne were living at one of the bigger Broadway district hotels; theaters and cafes and night clubs were close by, with plenty of New York money to be spent. Gangsters are hospitable souls.

One party was on Central Park West, in one of the newer, modern buildings. The rooms were large, beautifully decorated and contained many rich pieces of furniture, resultant from trips to Europe. The guest list consisted of 14. There were the host, a certain clothier and his wife, and Sammy and Pigeon, Verne Miller and a dinner partner, Frank and Frances, plus eight assorted men, all of whom could talk kindred subjects, such as the distance to New York from Sing Sing and whether certain magistrates could be reached with enough dough to dismiss the charges against an old pal, held for homicide.

However, these were only interludes. Mostly the talk was of golf and automobiles and clothes. After a time, the old Oklahoma bandit took Frances to the tremendous studio window, which, with rounded glass, provided a sweeping vista of Central Park. For a time they merely stood looking out over its quiet beauty, the serrated line of apartment houses opposite them on Fifth avenue, the constant stream of automobiles as they wound, like tiny figures in a child's game, along the curving driveways. Finally Frank Nash put an arm about Frances. There was romance in all this. Today was the first anniversary of their liaison.

What Do Film Stars Talk About Among Themselves? Servant Problem and Clothes.

Hollywood, Aug. 6.—What do movie stars talk about when they're alone? I've always wondered. These glamorous creatures, these shimmering American models of adventure and romance—what are they like with their hair down?

I asked Minna Gombell, the commedienne, whose good humor bubbles from her own spirit out here, just as it did when I knew her on Broadway.

"Come along to dinner," she invited. "See for yourself."

So we went to the home of one of the stars flashing brightest today. I'll let her and her guests be anonymous, because I accepted her hospitality, and this is written without permission or benefit of press agent.

The house was all the fan magazines predict: sort of ominous and out-sized, architecturally something midway between a kind of King Arthur Gothic and Kansas Georgian. A friendly little Scotch maid let us in, and we mushed through a few miles of thick red carpeted drawingroom, perfect for a Shriners' convention, into the more intimate library.

This room was lined with books. They were books that had been read: everything from Elsie Dinsmore to the "Forty Days of Musa Dagg," a collection of a lifetime, with the conventional show-off Gibbons' "Rome" in full morocco conspicious by its absence.

Only One Cocktail.

"What a precious dress," Minna burbled.

"Sixteen seventy-five," beamed the star. "My dear, you must try that shop. I just found it Thursday! A highball or a cocktail, Miss Davis?"

The highballs came in, only one for each of us. "No men, because my husband has gone to the fight," I was told. Well, this was wonderful. Three famous movie actresses—all blonde—all such close friends that there would be no reserves, no "side." I settled in one corner of a stupendous red plush chair, with a stuffed creature that might have been a horned toad with elephantiasis hovering over an ash tray that said without shame, "S S. Ile de France."

All during dinner, a meeager meal consisting of salad, sirloin steak, French fried potatoes, mixed vegetables in casserole and butterscotch pie, they kept me talking. All my best stories, which I enjoy telling, but I did want to listen!

New Deal Replaces NRA.

Before we went back to the library for coffee my hostess said shyly, "would you like to see my babies? They won't wake up if we go in." And so we slipped up to the nursery. It might have been any nursery — any intelligent mother's nursery, that is. The two little girls slept in their ivory-painted beds with a teddy-bear and a doll. The toys ranged neatly along the walls were few and very simple. The great star tucked a sheet back, moved a doubled-up arm, accepted my whispered superlatives as inadequate, and slipped out.

The coffee waited us, with one liqueur. "How are your new maids working out?" inquired a fellow-guest of our hostess.

"Oh, my dear, I'm very, very doubtful. The cook gets grumpy if lunch is 15 minutes late, and the butler is very sweet but he seems to admire a kind of antique effect in the silverware. Oh, if I have to go through all that again . . ."

So we swapped servant troubles.

Then we wondered if Paris dressmakers were actually going to put us back into those hideous short skirts. And agreed that it was absolutely ridiculous to spend a lot of money for dresses when you can get such cute little copies for $29.50 or less!

This took up quite a good deal of time, over countless pots of black coffee. Then my hostess began to worry about me. I could see her thinking; "Oh, my gracious, maybe we've bored her." So she cut into the discussion with:

And while I swallowed, with a rush of little-girl candor, she inquired, "Honestly, what IS the New Deal? Is it something that took the place of the NRA?"
